Mules and Men
Car Passes Train
Scrambling Children
Automobile on Rails

—By Arthur Brisbane—

CAMDEN, SOUTH CAROLINA, March 31—This is written on the way north from Florida, via the Seaboard Air Line that takes you "through the heart of the South," including Florida, both Carolinas, Georgia, Virginia.

At this moment, in South Carolina, you see through the car window individual colored men driving individual mules, preparing ground for cotton.

Wise men in New York and Washington tell the South, "You should plant no cotton, or very little, and thus increase the price."

But the ground is there, the cotton seed, the mule and the Negro to drive him are there. They must be used. Theorists will say, "Vary your crops and get rich that way." They underestimate the difficulty in selling variegated crops.

The British expert pointing to ducks swimming around on a little pond asked the Irish farmer, "Have you any idea what those ducks would be worth in the London market?"

"I have," said the Irish farmer. "And do you see that pond. Have you any idea what that water would be worth in hell if I could get it there?"

Prohibitive costs of transportation and defective methods of distribution are among our various troubles.

Millions of oranges and grapefruit are rotting on the ground in Florida. Millions of children and adults in the North need the fruit. You can buy grapefruit in Florida for a cent a piece and less, all the oranges you can put in the back of your automobile for 75 cents.

Perhaps automobile light transportation, utilizing the railroads' uninterrupted rights of way, will some day help settle the problem of distribution.

Just now, a little north of Fairfax, South Carolina, a small Chevrolet sedan car, raising a cloud of dust on the road, passes this fast train. It slows down going through a village, falls behind, then passes the train once more and is lost to sight in the distances.

Harvey S. Firestone has created a pneumatic rubber tire built with steel flanges to run at high speed on railroad tracks that ought to interest railroad men.

Recently a 12-cylinder Lincoln car, equipped with these pneumatic wheels, ran over the Seaboard Railway tracks from Miami to Jacksonville, 406 miles, in 348 minutes, not deducting 31 minutes for stopping time. The average running speed of 70 miles an hour went as high as 87 miles.

With the perfecting of special tires and engines designed for this work, perhaps without use of rubber tires, the speed could easily be raised to 100 or 150 miles an hour in stream line cars carrying 50 passengers. This would mean traveling from New York to San Francisco in 20 or 30 hours, New York to Chicago in from six to nine hours.

This will be accomplished, while waiting for development of the airplane to fool proof and weather proof perfection.

Railroads, in their rights of way, possess property that will give them absolute control of transportation on the ground, when they get ready to use those rights of way in modern fashion.

After Mr. Firestone accomplished his demonstration with a high-powered car, using railroad tracks and pneumatic tires, Henry Ford telegraphed to Mr. Firestone, "Your record marks a new era in practical high speed land transportation. My hearty congratulations on your accomplishment."

Henry Ford, who put ten million American families on wheels in a few years, knows something about transportation.

It is true, as Mr. Firestone telegraphed Henry Ford, that "This is a new development for faster, more comfortable and economical rail travel, which will reclaim thousands of miles of railroad trackage, little used today on account of other more efficient forms of transportation."

On a railroad siding, just out of Columbia, S. C., Negro children, boys and girls from six to twelve years old, are scrambling for coins thrown by passengers.

Two small girls dance energetically, until they are breathless, stimulating the white man's generous throwing of coins.

When the coins are thrown the children all scramble and the boys get them. Such is the fate of woman. The pitiful earnestness on the faces or the ragged black children, and the smiling condescension of the white men that throw them money, is interesting.

A delegation to investigate labor conditions in the Kentucky coal mines is on its way from an institution called the "Commonwealth College," of Mena, Arkansas. It is the only college of its kind, perhaps. Students must satisfactorily answer ques-

SALES TAX ON WALL ST. IS VOTED

House Levy Is One-Fourth of One Per Cent of the Stock Value; Tammany Loses

Washington, March 31 (AP)—A tax of 5 cents a $100 on sales of produce on exchanges, including grain and cotton, was voted into the new revenue bill today by the House. It is estimated to return $6,000,000.

Washington, March 31 (AP)—The House today stretched a revenue-raising hand toward Wall Street.

Over the opposition of the Tammany delegation, it voted a tax of one-fourth of 1 per cent on the transfer value of stock sales, and then took up other proposals to put levies on bond transfers and the sale of produce on exchanges. The stock sales tax was estimated to produce $75,000,000.

Another vote on it will be had tomorrow before the final action on the bill. The amendment does not apply on original issues.

In accepting it, the House again followed the course mapped out by the ways and means committee but the original proposal was altered by the adoption of an amendment by Representative Laguardia (R.), New York, under which the tax will be imposed on all orders placed by persons in this country for buying and selling stocks on foreign exchanges. He said it was designed to meet the threat that traders would transfer their operations to Canada.

The House adopted, 112 to 14, an amendment by Crisp to terminate the stock transfer tax on July 1, 1934.

Bills Taxing Chain Stores All Doomed

All bills proposing special taxes on chain stores will be sidetracked by the joint legislative committee on taxation, according to Senator Fish, chairman of the committee. He said the committee will report "next annual session" on all the bills.

At the time the bills were heard there was strenuous opposition from chambers of commerce and other trade organizations.

MRS. BEAL IS JAILED OVER LOAN CASE

Needham Society Leader Fails to Repay $9572 She "Borrowed" From Woman, 70

Without a quiver of emotion, Mrs. Lida M. Beal of Webster pk., Needham, prominent society matron, heard herself sentenced to jail today in Superior Court—and then rode to Charles st. jail in the "Black Mario" and was given a bath.

Her sentence followed a finding on Tuesday by Judge Harold P. Williams that she was in contempt of court for failing to repay $9572.60 to Mrs. Lavinia Nelson, 70, Appleton st., South End, lodging house owner.

According to the charge against the Needham society matron, whose daughter is a student at fashionable Bradford Academy, she borrowed 10,000 from the elderly Mrs. Nelson at 12 per cent interest, but declined to pay the balance of $9572.60.

RIDES IN "MARIA"

When Judge Williams passed sentence today that is designed to keep Mrs. eBal in jail until she pays, she took it as calmly as if she were merely a spectator.

Then she was taken to the detention pen for a short wait until the covered van arrived. She stepped into the "Black Maria" calmly and rode—its only passenger—to the jail, where she was received and booked in the usual way.

A few minutes later she was being given the bath required of all entering prisoners, and then was assigned to a cell. If her stay at the jail is of any duration, she will be given a jail uniform in a few days and assigned to some sort of work at the institution.

HAD BEEN ON BAIL.

Mrs. Beal had been out on $5000 bail until today when sentence was passed following the non-payment.

Gilbert W. Cox, counsel for Mrs. Nelson, told the court that Mrs. Beal borrowed money from elderly women, and offered them 12 per cent interest.

She would then lend the money to other wealthy women who were borrowing in anticipation of their husband's allowances, he said. These women, the court was told, gave valuable jewelry as collateral.

QUERIES POWER OF COUNCIL

Gov. Ely may ask Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Warner for an opinion as to the action of the governor's council in refusing to give reasons for their rejection of his appointees to public office.

"What I want to find out is whether I can be arbitrarily blocked for political purposes," said the Governor today in commenting on the council's refusal to give reasons for rejecting his nomination of James B. Ryan of North Adams to the South Essex Sewerage Board, to take the place of Alexander Whiteside, whose term expired.

"The appointing power is mine," added the Governor, "and the council's function is that of a check."

The Governor said he will take no further steps until he has received and read a report of yesterday's discussion of the subject at a council meeting.

NEW CLUE BY MYSTERY WOMAN

Activity in Search for Stolen Baby Centered Now in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, March 31—Philadelphia today was believed the focal point in the efforts of three Norfolk, Va., intermediaries to negotiate restoration of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby. This belief was predicated on three purported facts:

1—That John Hughes Curtis, millionaire shipbuilder and one of the intermediaries, was in Philadelphia during his mysterious 36-hour absence from Norfolk last week-end.

2—That a few hours before he left Norfolk an unidentified woman visited Mrs. Walter C. Hancock, active in philanthropic and club circles here, in connection with the trip the Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock made Monday to the Lindbergh estate in Hopewell.

3—That efforts are being made to locate Harry Henderson, former Camden, N. J., rum runner, and his former associate, Harry Collins, also known as Rogers, a Baltimore bootlegger, believed to have induced Curtis to act as intermediary.

Mrs. Hancock said today the investigation being conducted by Philadelphia police may take a week or two.

WITHHOLDS NAME

Mrs. Hancock, the wife of a coal dealer, said she was not at liberty to give the name of the woman.

"She is not sensational and has no desire to capitalize in any way on what she knows of the case," Mrs. Hancock said.

"She is certain that from the actions of certain people she knows the baby is in Philadelphia, or nearby, at least. The detectives are running down her clues.

New York, March 31—Eben M. Byers, chairman of A. M. Byers Co., died today in the Doctors Hospital.

Thomas McMahon, executive secretary of the United States Golf Association, and close friend of Mr. Byers, said he had been advised that pneumonia was the immediate cause of death but that a contributing factor was poisoning which developed from treatment of an infected jaw with radium.

Government by Hooey

—By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser—

CONGRESSIONAL outbursts against orderly taxation have discouraged those who have been seeking to stimulate business recovery. Congress soon will have to face indisputable facts.

The insincerity of the "soak the rich" bloc led by Representative La Guardia is apparent in the maneuver to let in DISGUISED SALES TAXES BY THE BACK DOOR.

Instead of a scientifically devised, widely diffused, moderate manufacturers' sales tax, such as has been successfully administered in Canada, Congress is now considering imposts that will lay burdens unevenly on special commodities, thus disturbing established channels of distribution.

La Guardia, himself, kingpin in the virtual revival of the KNOW NOTHING movement, while assailing the manufacturers' sales tax, advocates an excise tax on beer.

THOSE who favor excise taxes on liquors, provided they could be legalized, and on cigarettes, while opposing the sales tax principle, accept the substance while purporting to disapprove the appearance of the sales tax.

Taxes on cigarettes and beer, though entirely proper and desirable imposts, would not fall primarily on the rich, but on the masses of consumers.

Even taxes on automobiles and refrigerators, which have been proposed as alternatives for a soundly conceived selected sales tax, attempt to do in a round-about manner what the subcommittee of the House ways and means committee sought vainly to do in the spirit of law and order.

It is highly dangerous to attune taxation programs to the UNSOUND EMOTIONAL CLAMOR OF DEMAGOGUES.

THE proposal for confiscatory surtaxes is unworkable, for the wealthy have legal avenues for evading the tax.

And, if the proposed confiscation could be enforced, the results would be CALAMITOUS to American prosperity. The British experiment in bleeding industry white with excessive taxation re-

Coolidge Begs Pardon With $2500 Check

St. Louis, March 31 (AP)—Former President Calvin Coolidge has sent his check for $2500 in settlement of a court summons asking $100,000 damages, instigated by Lewis Tibbets, St. Louis insurance man who claimed his reputation as an insurance man was damaged by a statement of Coolidge in a radio address last October.

Tibbetts, who says he is the "leading advocate in the United States of these-called term life insurance policies," said Mr. Coolidge injured his reputation in the follwking statement over the air:

"Beware of the so-called 'twister' and 'abstractor' or any agent who offers to save money for you by replacing your policy in another company."

The former President was served with a summons last month at his home in Massachusetts, preparatory to the filing of a damage suit by Tebbetts. The suit was not filed, however. Tebbetts also instituted similar action against the New York Life Insurance Co., of which Coolidge was a director.

Tebbetts said the summons against Coolidge would be dismissed April 7, but that a damage suit against the insurance company would be filed then.

In his letter the former President said he was informed Tebbetts felt that the radio address "might be construed by your friends and acquaintances as reflecting upon you and the plan of insurance you are advocating.

"I had no knowledge of the controversy relating to the plan of insurance you are advocating, and therefore my statements could not have had that comprehension or intent, and any such construction would be entirely incorrect. I assure you that no personal offense was intended."

NEW LAW AIDS CLOSED BANKS

Gov. Ely today signed a bill authorizing the bank commissioner to borrow money on the assets of banks in process of liquidation in order that he may pay dividends up to 25 per cent to depositors of the closed banks.

The measure was advocated editorially by the Boston Evening American.

ESCAPE OF GRAY WAS PLANNED OUTSIDE

"Bad Willie" Is Back in a Cell and Raves About Being "Double-Crossed"

A Boston politician holding public office is suspected of having engineered the plot that resulted in the delivery of William E. (Bad Willie) Gray, bandit desperado, from Charles st. jail.

This was learned exclusively by the Boston Evening American today, while Bad Willie, recaptured shortly before midnight in a Columbus ave. hotel room with his "trusty" accomplice, Vincent Zamotel, was back in jail, raving about a "double-cross" and threatening to make someone "pay."

HAD VISITED GRAY

The politician under suspicion is known to have visited Gray in the jail hospital and is believed to have notified him of the "outside" progress made in the delivery plot.

He is suspected of having conspired with Gray's one-time bandit pal, William Weyand, alias Wegand, of Green st., Jamaica Plain, whose arrest in Chelsea yesterday a few hours after the jail break, through a smart piece of police work, left Bad Willie and Zamotel "stranded" in their temporary hideout near police headquarters, where a squad of 50 officers gas-bombed them into surrender.

WEYAND HIRED ROOM

Weyand is believed to be the man who drove Gray and Zamotel away from the jail after their daring escape. He also hired the "hideout" room last Friday and procured the saw and blades with which the pair sawed their way to freedom.

Whether Weyand was alone when he hired the room or whether he had a companion was a moot question.

Police suspect that if he had a companion it was the politician under suspicion.

WOMAN PICKS MARSTEN

Harry Morris, night janitor of the Columbus ave. resort, said only one man hired the "hide," but Mrs.

HOUSE MOVES TO GET $241,000,000 MORE IN TAXES

BATTLE LOOMS ON PASSAGE TOMORROW

Tammany Admits Defeat on Stock Sales Levy; Vote to Come on Auto Figures

Washington, March 31 (AP)—The House pushed ahead today toward completion of the billion-dollar revenue bill and prepared for separate votes tomorrow on levies on automobiles, war-time surtaxes and estate taxes, coal and oil import levies and stock transfers.

As the ways and means committee went into executive session to consider final drafts of amendments to be substituted for the defeated sales tax, Acting Chairman Crisp said indications were that five separate votes would be demanded when the bill comes to final passage.

The amendments drafted by the committee for submission today were calculated to produce $241,000,000 of revenue and bring the bill's total to $984,500,000. Another proposal considered in addition to these calls for a revision of the depreciation allowances of corporations, so as to bring in $12,000,000 more.

TO SAVE $273,000,000

Savings of $273,000,000 in appropriations and postoffice expenses are expected to round out the program to meet a prospective $1,241,000,000 Treasury deficit in 1933.

The first item laid before the House today was the levy of one-fourth of one per cent of the value of all stock transactions. This is expected to bring in $75,000,000.

It is opposed by the Tammany delegation but Representative Cullen of New York, leader of that group, said "the temper of the House is such that its adoption is certain."

Representative Clancy (R.), of Michigan, served notice he would demand a separate vote on the 3 per cent tax on automobiles, the 2 per cent levy on trucks and the 1 per cent assessment on accessories, which are expected to yield $57,000,000.

Majority Leader Rainey said: "We certainly will have a separate vote on the Swing amendment re-establishing the surtax rates on incomes in excess of $100,000."

McCORMICK IN FIGHT

The amendment, sponsored by Representative Swing (R.) California, impose rates graduated up to a maximum 65 per cent surtax on incomes in excess of $10,000,000 in addition to the normal income tax rate.

When the bill reaches the parliamentary stage for final passage tomorrow, a vote also will be sought by Representative McCormack (D.) Massachusetts, a member of the ways and means committee, on the one-cent a gallon tax on oil imports, now estimated to yield $25,000,000.

The Treasury originally estimated it would return but $5,000,000 but proponents claim it will yield $40,000,000 to $60,000,000, depending on the quantity of imports.

The levy of ten cents a hundred pounds on imported coal carried in the amendment by Representative Boland (D.) Pennsylvania, also is opposed and an effort will be made for a separate vote that might strike it out.

Representative Schafer (R.) Wisconsin, said he would ask for a separate vote on malt, malt syrup and wort, which is used in making home brew.

Caught in Elevator, Critically Injured

Max Lourie of Brighton st., West End, was critically injured today when he was caught in an elevator at 113 Albany st.

A student might seek a long time the correct definitions for those names and words, remembering Voltaire's "Let us define our terms."

In the "Commonwealth College" nobody pays for his education, no teacher is paid. Everybody does chores, helps with the cooking, gardening, etc.

They all wear gray flannel shirts, and overalls, and there are no degrees for students.

PET DOG SAVES SIX IN FIRE

Their pet collie dog saved the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hollis and their four small children as fire swept their home at Union st., Rockland, early today, causing $4000 damage.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollis were aroused by the dog at 2 a. m. and discovered that the house was filled with smoke. The fire, which was of undetermined origin, had been burning for some time and had gained considerable headway.

Hollis rushed to the home of George Whitman, a neighbor, and telephoned fire headquarters. While he was telephoning Mrs. Hollis aroused and dressed their four children, ranging in age from four years to a few months.

She carried them downstairs to safety and they were taken into neighboring homes. The building, a two-family house, was unoccupied on the first floor, the Hollis family living upstairs.

BUSINESS MEN START 'Y' DRIVE

Nearly 200 Boston business men met in the Chamber of Commerce today to launch the annual budget-balancing canvass of the Boston Y. M. C. A., which will be conducted through April for the sum of $115,750.

Under the leadership of T. Grafton Abbott, president of the Boston Y. M. C. A., 250 men are out to raise the money.

Divided into eight groups, the first five divisions will raise $98,000; the Hyde park group has a goal of $7500; the Dorchester branch a quota of $6000, and the Railroad Y. M. C. A. an objective of $6250.

Abbott, addressing workers at today's luncheon, urged them to make the goal "in order that the human values of our young men and boys may be conserved."

William E. Adams, general secretary, told workers that the cost of conducting the campaign this year has been cut two-thirds from previous years; that the Y. M. C. A. budget for 1932 has been cut through combining of departments, withdrawing from the budget all requirements that are not of a strictly program nature, adjustment in wages and elimination of all reserve items.

Frank Prescott, advertising manager for the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., urged the men to be "100 per centers," each man brining in the amount of money represented in the subscription cards of prospects.

Love May Halt Divorce for Ann Harding

By CAROL CROSS

Copyright, 1932, by International News Service.

Reno, Nev., March 31 (INS)—This haven of the mismated wondered today if the "love and respect" Ann Harding and Harry Bannister have for each other may rise as a barrier to the divorce they are seeking as a way to "complete happiness."

No legal authority was willing to predict that Nevada courts would ban their divorce on grounds of collusion. It appeared possible, however, that statements of the blonde screen star and her actor husband in announcing the parting of the ways might make it difficult to establish grounds which would not constitute collusion, even under Nevada's liberal laws.

In announcing their determination to seek divorce, both spoke of their "love and respect" for each other.

It was reported that decision was reached for Bannister to seek the decree in Nevada rather than in California because of the strict collusion laws in the latter state.

It was learned he conferred with William Woodburn, president of the State Bar Association, but neither he nor Woodburn would comment.

"Collusion would probably be held by a court to deprive a person of a decree," said former District Judge George A. Bartlett, an authority on divorce laws, who sat for 11 years on the bench of Washoe County.

"Statements made public by a husband and wife intending to sever an unhappy union rarely state the real, fundamental weakness in the marital structure. This is only brought out at the trial and is usually sufficient to justify the remedy."

Bannister's statements, he said:

"I see nothing in these statements which jeopardizes the right of either party to demand from a court the opening of an avenue to greater happiness.

"Nothing is collusion, where a real cause for divorce exists," said Atty.-Gen. Gray Washburn.

sulted in making depression chronic on the British Isles, and in transforming large numbers of British workers into permanent boarders at the bureau which dispenses enervating doles.

Organized wealth in the United States, which admittedly committed blunders of commission and omission, has already been drastically soaked by a virtual capital levy in the form of deflation of prices of securities and real estate.

Even before the House of Representatives embarked on an orgy to destroy initiative and enterprise, American business was choked by the discouraged state of mind of would-be profit-makers.

UNDER our bicameral system in Washington, the Senate has a magnificent opportunity to align itself on the side of orderly government and sound economics by drawing up a tax plan, similar to the original proposal of the House committee, which is consonant with national needs under existing emergency conditions.

The social cost of an ill considered and punitive tax scheme, which would further shrink business activity, would be colossal, and, as American voters analyze this tangled economic subject, they will strongly rebuke the representatives who sought popularity by running counter to sound economic principles.

Perhaps by the November election the American public will be able to gauge the effect of the threatened tax follies on the timing of economic recuperation. If so, voters will doubtless drive from public life the ignorant emotionalists who have "PLAYED POLITICS WITH HUMAN MISERY."

SOVIET MOVES TO BOOST PAY 300 PER CENT

Increase Comes More Quickly Than Expected for Those With Smallest Wage

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press)

Moscow, March 31 (AP)—Members of the Communist party, including the highest government officials and factory workers who heretofore have been limited to the most meager salaries, may soon cash in on substantial pay increases.

The political bureau, it was learned today, is considering trebling the maximum monthly income allowed party members from 300 to 900 rubles (about $150 to $450).

The "raises" are planned in accordance with the policy outlined by Joseph Stalin nine months ago when he decided on abolition of the system of "equal wages for all." Factory workers heretofore have been limited to the smallest salaries in order to set an example for the rest of the proletariat.

THREE FACTORS INVOLVED

Three factors were said to be inspiring for action. First is the enormous loss of time and energy by party members holding important posts due to the necessity for seeking places where they may buy necessaries at prices commensurate with incomes. Second, that many, especially those with large families, have sought extra work at writing or lecturing in order to augment their income. Third, that many capable officials have refused to accept posts of responsibility because they received the same pay as subordinates without the responsibility.

Only the highest officials, such as commissars, probably vice commissars and heads of important government trusts would receive the 900-ruble maximum, but lesser officials would be advanced proportionately above their present pay.

8000 VOTE ON AMOSKEAG PAY

Manchester, N. H., March 31—The result of the balloting by Amoskeag Corporation workers on the company's proposal to slash wages from 2 to 40 per cent will be made known tonight.

Balloting ended at noon today, as a conference was being held between Henry A. Rauch, the Amoskeag Corporation's agent, and William Mara, head of the Workers' Council, made up of 8000 employes.

On weekly wages of $15 or under the cut would be from two to five per cent, under the proposal. On wages from $15 to $20 the slash would be from 22 to 30 per cent, and on wages from $20 to $30, the cut would be from 30 to 40 per cent.

It is understood the workers have agreed not to accept the wage cut proposal, in any event, if the Amoskeag Corporation will not guarantee at least six months' steady employment.

CURLEY VETOES TAX LOAN PLAN

Mayor Curley today vetoed an order of the city council calling for approval of Chapter 94, Acts of 1932, which would permit taxpayers to pay 90 per cent of their municipal assessments in advance and would obligate the city to pay them 6 per cent interest on the money.

The mayor explained that when he originally presented the act to the council, banks were seeking interest rates of 5½ to 6 per cent on money loaned the city. The recent decrease in such rates now makes it inadvisable to adopt the act and would place an unjustifiable burden on the city.

Should conditions during the next few months warrant acceptance of the act on short notice there is nothing to prevent such action, the mayor said.

Hugh Larrimer, department of justice agent from Washington, talked at length today in Charles st. jail with Harry Mack, whose deportation to Scotland through Canada was held up last week until he could be questioned on the Leavenworth prison break and a Lindbergh clue.

The Lindbergh "information" has since been declared worthless and Larrimer queried him on information Mack said he had concerning the prison break and riots.

BACK BAY MAN IS FOUND SHOT

With a bullet wound in his breast and a revolver, with one cartridge discharged, in his bathrobe pocket, Amos O. Abbott, 63, a salesman, was found today on a basement floor at 60 Charlesgate east, Back Bay, where he has an apartment upstairs.

He was sent to City hospital, but the first word police had of the case was when the hospital notified headquarters that a gunshot case had arrived.

Police were unable to get any information from Abbott as he lay on the operating table, but at the apartments his wife, Mrs. Ella B. Abbott, said he had been ill for four years and had spells of despondency.

Joseph Slattery, janitor of the apartment building, found Abbott after hearing a shot.

He notified Mrs. Abbott, who called Dr. George C. Moore, and the doctor advised that Abbott be sent to the hospital.

Peru, in Berkshires, 'Digs Out' of 14-Ft. Drifts of Snow

Springfield, March 31 (AP)—Peru, perched on a hilltop of the Berskhires, today is rejoicing in renewed contact with the outside world, which came about late yesterday, when a 10-ton state tractor pushed its way into the hamlet. It ended a struggle in progress since the storm of last Monday piled the roads with drifts that in places were 14 feet deep. Even today one-way traffic into and out of the little town is the rule.

'AL' SMITH FOR WALL ST., SAYS MRS. TOWNE

Mayor Curley's Campaign for Roosevelt Is Praised by Woman Publisher

"Al Smith, Newton D. Baker, Governor Ritchie, et al., are all tied up to Wall Street and the present regime," Elizabeth Towne, head of the Elizabeth Towne Co., Inc., Holyoke publishers, charged today in a letter to Mayor Curley.

"We are watching developments with great interest," the woman publisher said. "I am so glad you are doing something effective for Franklin D. Roosevelt for president. He is the only man I have any hope of at all toward changing the present regime in Washington.

"More power to that golden tongue of yours."

LETTER TO SMITH

With her letter to Curley, she enclosed a copy of a letter she said she wrote in January to Alfred E. Smith. The letter said, in part:

"Greetings to you from one who has been interested in you and your doings and sayings ever since you were first elected governor of New York, and who electioneered for you and voted for you in the last presidential election.

"But now I must urgently protest against your actions and words, or lack of words, which are giving to the public the idea that 'Al Smith aims to block Roosevelt as standard bearer,' as headlined in the papers.

"WRONG AND RIGHT SIDES"

"In all of the happenings in New York state in the last three years or so I find Franklin Roosevelt on the right side and you lining up on the wrong side—the big bankers' side—just as in 1928 I found you lining up on the side of all of us instead of with the big bankers—Wall Street.

"Oh, my dear Al Smith, you were great in 1928. And the opportunity faces you to be still greater in 1932. Can you measure up to that greatness?

"I am writing you this letter, still hoping that you are the same great man that you were in 1928, and that you can still see the light and make the right choice for the Democratic party and for all of us whose assets and incomes are frozen solid in the hands of the bankers."

TELLS OF PLIGHT OF JOBLESS

To bring about additional employment, Reps. Eugene P. Durgin and John J. Reardon of South Boston today appeared before the House rules committee of the Legislature seeking an additional appropriation of $300,000 to remove hulks and wrecks from the East Boston and Chelsea waterfronts and improvement of metropolitan park reservations.

Stressing the need of placing more men to work, Rep. Durgin told of the plight of a 23-year-old married man who went to work in the Blue Hill reservation.

"This young man, with a wife and two young children, had eaten no food for three days," he said. "He was too proud to accept charity. He fainted from undernourishment the first day he went to work and was taken to City Hospital, where he remained two days. He has since recovered and is now working."

Juan de la Cierva

Cierva said in an interview that he was trying to make flying as simple as automobiling, believing such a development was the logical one for the greatest future in aviation.

He said he did not think it was absurd or impossible to say that some day man would be able to fly to the moon, if means are discovered to harness atomic energy.

Hawks Tells of Battling Fierce Storms in Long Hop

New York, March 31—Capt. Frank Hawks arrived here with a passenger, Amon G. Carter, from Fort Worth, Texas, after passing through what he described as the worst storms he had ever encountered in the air.

Capt. Hawks

The wind was so terrific at one time, Hawks said, that it tore the front fabric of the right wing off, and the jar resulting from the impact caused them to believe at first the entire wing had given way.

The wind later tore to a lesser extent the left wing's front fabric. Captain Hawks made the flight in a borrowed plane.

CHARGES GIRL WHO SHOT AT MAN KEPT IN TERROR BY POLICE

REFUSED FOR 3 HOURS TO GET A LAWYER

Judge Sturtevant, Her Counsel, Declares Secretary Browbeaten in Station House

Prediction that neither Ralph E. Parker, 33-year-old insurance broker, nor his wife, would be present to prosecute the case was made today in Waltham court by her counsel when Miss Blanche Fuller, 34, Parker's discharged secretary, was arraigned for shooting at Parker.

The discharged secretary pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill Parker late yesterday at his home in Watertown.

Her case was continued until Monday for hearing and bail was set at $5000 after her counsel, Judge Sturtevant of Somerville, had engaged in heated words with Police Lieut. Burke of Watertown.

ACCUSES POLICE

Judge Sturtevant charged that Watertown police had refused for three hours last night to notify him of the girl's arrest, because they wished to browbeat Miss Fuller without counsel's interference.

The girl's counsel also called the court's attention to the fact that neither Parker nor his wife was present at today's proceedings.

Miss Fuller was taken into custody after Parker and his wife overpowered her. During a long questioning by police, she claimed that Parker had taken everything she had, including some cash. She said she was preparing to take legal steps to recover her property.

THREATENED VENGEANCE

Parker told police he discharged Miss Fuller, who had been in his employ for a year, last Friday and that she swore she would break up his home. He said he had been forced to discharge her because she tried to make trouble between him and his wife. She had been a frequent visitor at his home, he said.

Miss Fuller, who lives at 1140 Commonwealth ave., Allston, went to the Parker home in Clyde rd., Watertown, at about 5 p. m., yesterday, according to Miss Regina Lawson, the maid, and decided to wait when told that Mr. and Mrs. Parker were not at home.

SAVED BY WIFE.

A short time later Mrs. Parker entered and as Parker turned into the path to the house, Miss Fuller ran to the front porch and opened fire. Mrs. Parker seized her, making several several shots go wild. Parker, who escaped being hit, ran to his wife's assistance and the maid rushed to School and Belmont sts., where she summoned Patrolman Edward P. Holden.

Want Norfolk Help Under Civil Service

Seven Boston patrolmen, suspended many months ago for infractions of police rules, will be reinstated by Civil Service Commissioner Paul E. Tierney as soon as request is made by Police Commissioner Hultman, the civil service head said today.

Those who violated minor rules will be returned to duty without a hearing and hearings will be granted those found guilty of major offenses, he said.

He added that no request for reinstatement has reached his office yet.

ICEBERGS PERIL OCEAN LINERS

Warning that numerous icebergs and large areas of field ice are endangering transatlantic shipping between Boston and European prots was sent out today by the hydrographic office.

Twenty-five large bergs and numerous smaller ones are reported in the northern lanes. The ice has reached transatlantic "Lane C," the track used by vessels at this time of year.

Wireless warnings have been sent to all navigating officers to keep close watch. The United States coast guard boat Tampa left the navy yard today for her annual ice patrol. The new cutter Pontchartrain, now at Norfolk, will leave there within a few days for Boston to fit out as relieving ship

Kidnaping Laid to Dry Law by Lindy Grandaunt

Jersey City, N. J., March 31 (INS)—The kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby was laid squarely on prohibition and accompany lawlessness today by Mrs. Agnes Morrow Scandrett, grandaunt of the missing child.

Mrs. Scandrett returned from Turkey aboard the liner Exarch via Boston.

"The kidnaping convinces me that as long as we have prohibition no home in this country is safe," she said.

"We are at the mercy of the gangs. They are thriving on the general disregard for law."

Mrs. Scandrett brought back a number of toys which she had purchased for Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., before she had learned of the kidnaping.

DRYS, BOOTLEGS LINKED

"This crime should wake people up to what is going on," she said. "I cannot believe that they realize how strongly intrenched the criminal element is in this country.

"And the pity of it is that so many of our finest citizens are blind to it all. They are down there in the trenches with the bootleggers.

"In New Jersey, my own state, there are dry leaders who are fighting for the same thing that the bootleggers are fighting for. They don't seem to comprehend that. They don't seem to know that the gangsters want the dry laws left on the books just as badly as they do.

"And Senator Borah—I always used to think a lot of him. But see him now."

DEPLORES BORAH'S STAND

Mrs. Scandrett referred to the Senator's position as a leader of the dry cause.

"Such a thing as the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby couldn't happen in the old countries," she said.

"They might kidnap there for revenge or hate. But it is only here that organized gangs have their way."

Mrs. Scandrett, a sister of the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, and widow of Richard Scandrett, Pittsburgh attorney, visited her sister, Miss Alice Morrow, in Constantinople.

ROXBURY GIRL IN LINDBERGH TIP

A Roxbury mother of 13 children gave police the latest Boston Lindbergh "clue" today when she reported one of her daughters boasted she knew the whereabouts of the baby.

The daughter formerly lived at the Franklin sq. house but recently returned to Roxbury and since has disappeared again, the mother said.

"She said she had been hanging around with bootleggers and racketeers and knew all about the kidnaping," the mother told Deputy Supt. James McDevitt.

Sergt. William Mutz and Special Officer William Dooley of the East Dedham St. station were assigned to find the girl. The mother's name was withheld.

47 ARRAIGNED IN RUM HAUL

Stamford, Ct., March 31 (AP)—A week's continuance in the case of Louis Pope of White Plains, N. Y., reputed lieutenant of Owney Madden, New York underworld figure, was granted today when 47 men arrested in connection with the recent seizure of $250,000 worth of liquor on the lighter William H. Moody of Rockport, Me., were arraigned.

Judge Abraham Wolsey also continued 10 other cases.

25,000 MINERS CALLED OUT

Columbus, O., March 31 (AP)—An attempt to spread the Ohio coal strike to every mine in the state and the West Virginia Panhandle will be made by the United Mine Workers of America.

The first step was taken when international and district officers of the union called for a strike of all miners in District 6, comprising the Panhandle and Ohio, effective tomorrow.

Lee Hall, president of the district, estimated the call would affect 25,000 miners, including 12,000 already idle because of a wage dispute. An additional 10,000 miners in the district have drifted from the union since the breakdown of the Jacksonville agreement, Hall said.

GOV. ROOSEVELT BEHIND VETS, SAYS SON

Against Prohibition and for a Living Wage, James T. Declares at Forum

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Placing his father solidly behind the war veterans, against prohibition and for a living wage for unemployed, James T. Roosevelt, son of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, today was principal speaker at Mayor Curley's "Roosevelt Forum," 333 Washington st.

Young Roosevelt returned from Maine this morning, where he saw his father gather 12 pledged delegates.

"AS MAINE GOES."

"As goes Maine, so goes the nation, is what the Republicans say. I guess we can say the same thing," he said in opening his speech.

"When Governor Roosevelt's record is placed before the people here there is no question as to how the citizens will vote.

"He is solidly behind the ex-service men in their efforts to get what is owed them.

"He is solidly against prohibition and solidly for a living wage for unemployed.

"I had a telephone talk with my father and he said: 'You cannot fool the people of Massachusetts.'"

SEES TRUST'S HAND

Archer H. Cohen of Boston College, another speaker, charged opposition to Roosevelt may "be traced of the power trust, whose avaricious desires they know Roosevelt will check."

At the close of the meeting Mayor Curley announced that forum headquarters would move Monday to the Tomforde building, Court st. The quarters on Washington st. will be retained for office work.

Curley will invade Hyde Park, bailiwick of Franw J. Donahue, in a series of rallies tonight.

Of four speeches to be delivered, the address in the municipal building, River and Central sts., will see the greatest concentration on the part of the mayor.

Donahue, slate maker for the Smith forces, has been the special target for the mayor's artillery since the breakdown of compromise negotiations between the Smith and Roosevelt supporters.

OTHER RALLIES TONIGHT

Prior to his appearance in Hyde Park Mayor Curley, who insists that he was never in better physical condition in his life, despite the throat ailment which has been bothering him for the last week, will speak at rallies in Aperion Hall, Grove Hall, at 8:30 o'clock, at the Henry L. Pierce school, Codman sq., section at 9:10, and in Wellington auditorium, Mattapan, at 9:40.

Wilcox's Condition Reported as Poor

The condition of Standish Wilcox, private social secretary to Mayor Curley, was reported at City Hospital as rather poor early today. Wilcox was admitted to the hospital Tuesday.

SECRETLY WED TO HEIRESS

Katherine Sherburne French, heiress to the French spice millions in Rochester, N. Y., made a very demure appearance last night in St. Paul's Church, Rochester, as bridesmaid for a friend—and Lieut. Marshall R. Greer, commandant of Squantum naval air station, chuckled as he looked on.

The lieutenant chuckled because he held a secret and the secret was that the demure bridesmaid had become his bride in that same church only a few hours earlier.

He and Miss French, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. French of Rochester, were married by Rev. Dr. George E. Norton, rector of St. Paul's Church. There were present only the bride's immediate family and Miss Virginia Bantel and Burton C. Smith, both of Rochester society.

After the marriage, Miss Bantel and Smith hastened to prepare for their own wedding in the same church, at which the new, but still secret, Mrs. Greer, appeared as the demure bridesmaid.

Lieut. Greer and his bride will sail Saturday from New York for a honeymoon in Bermuda, and will live in Boston on their return.

Greer was a widower and has a daughter five years old.

HEIRESS HELD IN $28.50 FRAUD

New York, March 31—Miss Harriet Russell, former Wellesley College student, and graduate of Harvard summer school and at Boston School of Expression, was held for the grand jury today for the third time on charges of swindling storekepers. She is said to be an heiress to $150,000.

She is charged with forging a check for $30, paying a bill of $1.50 and receiving the balance in cash.

She was expelled from Wellesley in 1909 for theft of a $25 check from a fellow student. In 1923 she was charged with theft of merchandise from Fifth ave. shops by charge accounts in names of parents of her pupils in the fashionable Tuxedo Park School, Tuxedo, N. Y.

Later with forged references she became a teacher at the Standish Manor School, Halifax, Mass., where she taught for six years and was principal for two.

In 1927 while a teacher in Scarsdale, N. Y., High School, she was sentenced to Welfare Island for treatment by a psychiatrist. Relatives attributed her conduct to a deficient pituitary gland.

Rum Raid Without Warrant Held Illegal by U. S. Court

AGENT REBUKED AND TWO MEN ARE FREED

Jenney Declares Officers Acted Without Constitutional Authority in Arrests

A dry agent has no right to raid a place without a search warrant and makes himself liable if he does so, Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney ruled in federal court today as he dismissed a complaint against two defendants.

The defendants were Andrew DeMarco of 160 Pearl st., Malden, and James Sears of Raymond, N. H., charged with posession of liquor and maintaining a liquor nuisance at a 50-foot bar in Carroll st., Chelsea.

Dry Agent John H. Whiteside testified he entered the place without a search warrant on March 21 after the door was opened and he saw what he supposed was a bottle of whiskey on the bar and several men drinking.

"I warned the defendants of their constitutional rights," said Whiteside.

"Had anybody warned you of your constitutional rights?" countered Commissioner Jenny.

"What do you mean?" queried Whiteside.

"You had no right to be there without a warrant."

"I just testified I saw a bottle of whiskey on the counter."

"You had no right there without a warrant to search the place," said Jenney, who ruled the evidence incompetent.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Hugo Bagnulo represented the givernment. Former Asst. U. S. Atty. Joseph V. Carroll appeared for the defendants.

Bagnulo said more than 300 bottles of beer, a gallon of wine and implements were seized in the raid.

Asked if the defendants would get the liquor and equipment he said they would not.

Cut Recommended in Outlay for Guard

The joint conference committee of the House and Senate today agreed on the executive budget without increasing it to the extent previously recommended by the Senate. The latter increased an appropriation for National Guard maneuvers from $20,000 to $25,000, but the House refused to concur.

The conference committee will recommend that the House recede from its position and that both branches approve a $5000 cut in the appropriation for National Guard rifle practice expense.

POLITICIAN HELPED GRAY IN HIS ESCAPE FROM JAIL

C. B. Leonard, an occupant of the house, said she was sure two men went to the place, and she identified as one of them a picture of John B. (War Bug) Marsden, the former aviator, sought for questioning in the Lindbergh case.

Morris looked at Marsden-'s picture and said he was positive he was not the man with whom he talked.

Several holdup victims will also view the jail lineup, among them the manager and two women tellers of the Codman sq. branch of the Dorchester Trust Co., which was held up Monday by a trio of bandits who got $5000.

Police suspect the holdup may have been planned by Gray's pals to secure funds for the escape.

Despite the demonstration Gray gave jail officers yesterday of his desperation, he was under no special guard today but was being treated as any other prisoner.

GRAY IN REGULAR CELL

He was in a regular cell, not in the hospital section from which he made his getaway, but he had the right to yard exercise if he wanted it. He didn't.

Sheriff John A. Keliher, who arrived at the jail shortly after noon, said he planned to let Gray and Zamotel "sit for a while" before questioning them. He said he would take care of the investigation in his "own way."

He did not know, he said, that a politician was under suspicion by police as having been implicated in the delivery plans. He said he was convinced that nobody inside the jail except Gray and Zamotel were in the conspiracy and he exonerated other prisoners in the hospital section.

Zamotel is in a regular cell and Weyand is in a cell remote from them so there is no opportunity of contact.

Samuel Lerner, arrested with Weyand but held in a police cell last night after he was bailed from the jail and rearrested, was characterized as a "dirty rat" after he had been grilled this morning by Supt. Crowley, Deputy Supt. McDevitt and Capt. John M. Anderson.

LERNER CALLED "RAT"

Capt. Anderson supplied the characterization when he turned to Special Officer Dan Curran, who had Lerner in custody after the grilling, and shouted:

"Put that dirty rat in a cell downstairs and keep him there till I send for him."

Capt. Anderson told newspapermen:

"He won't talk. He will be returned to state prison for violation of parole if we don't get anything on him in this case."

He said Lerner admitted meeting Weyand the night before the jail break and of driving with him and his sweetheart from Center st., Jamaica Plain, to Chelsea. He said he left Weyand and his girl in Chelsea.

"I don't know what became of him then," he told the police heads.

COHENS ARE GRILLED

When Lerner had been taken back to his cell, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cohen of Charlotte st., Dorchester, were called before the board for grilling. They own the car Lerner was driving when arrested.

Mrs. Cohen conducts a millinery shop in West st., and Cohen formerly had a hardware store in Brookline, Capt. Anderson said.

He said they admitted lending Lerner their car the night before the delivery and said they drove to Chelsea with him and left him there. Whether the hour conflicted with Lerner's version of his movements, Capt. Anderson would not say.

The car is registered to Ethel Grudzin, of 788 Blue Hill ave., which is Mrs. Cohen's maiden name and former address. This angle is under investigation.

$1000 FOR ACCOMPLICE

The escape plot began with Gray's capture in New Hampshire several weeks ago, formed rapidly in the mind of the gunman as he lay on a cot at City Hospital recovering from wounds received in a pistol battle, took shape with his transfer to the jail hospital, and was executed after he cajoled and threatened Zamotel and promised to pay him $1000 for his delivery.

Zamotel was the unwilling accomplice, jail officials believe. He had only to serve until next July to gain parole on good behavior. But with the coming of "Bad Willie" to the jail hospital, the prospect of being "taken care of" was held out as a lure—that and the constant urging of Gray to get him the saws and join him in the dash for freedom.

Back in his cell today, Gray cursed his confederates outside the jail walls who deserted him when he most needed their help. He didn't know that the arrest of Weyand in Chelsea prevented the delivery of clothing that would have allowed him to leave his hideout at 282 Columbus ave. for a "place in the country."

CONDEMNS PALS

"It's a rat pinch," he snarled at the detectives who swarmed into his room with guns leveled. "My friends were going to take care of me and look at the spot they picked for a hide. Well, someone will pay and they'll pay with me over in State's Prison."

Gray was a woe-begone figure when he walked out of his fifth floor room with hands upraised. A mustard gas bomb fired from the fire-escape through the window half-blinded him, and he made no resistance as Lieut.-Inspector William LeBlanc snapped on the handcuffs.

GRILLED BY SHERIFF

He was clad only in a tattered bathrobe, underwear, shoes and stockings. He limped on the leg struck by a bullet fired by Sergt. Philip Sweeney, a railroad detective, in an Allston holdup a month ago.

Behind him walked Zamotel, barefooted and shivering after a day in a unheated room, during which he dared not go out for food.

They were taken to police headquarters where Sheriff Keliher and Special Officers Arthur Tiernan and Elmer Hamlett of the Brighton station first questioned them.

The sheriff addressed all his remarks to Zamotel.

"Your liberty didn't last long, Joe," he said.

"No, not as long as I expected, sheriff," Joe replied.

Gray glanced at Tiernan and said:

"Hello, Arthur, where have you been?"

"Oh, out hustling on a worth while angle. Why did you play so near to home, Gray?"

"It wasn't my choice," said Gray. "If I knew they were going to drop me off in the South End I wouldn't have left the can. The outside men picked the spot—and what a spot!

READ ABOUT ESCAPE

"No heat, no food, no clothes—and look at the kid's feet," said Gray, pointing at Zamotel. "No shoes for him. Well, I expected to be out in the country by this time—out in the wide open spaces."

Gray twisted his wired jaw, scarred by a bullet wound, and grinned.

"Well, such are the breaks," he said. "I took care of my end but my so-called pals didn't take care of theirs."

He scowled and added bitterly;

"It's a rat pinch if you ask me. Some one is going to pay for it."

"What were you doing when we walked in on you?" asked an officer.

"Just reading about you donkeys running around looking for me," said "Bad Willie," and he grinned again.

PAIR UNARMED

Lieut. Le Blanc led the raiding squad on the rooming house and shouted for Gray to walk out with his arms upraised as the gas bomb tore through the window.

"Don't shoot," Gray yelled. "I haven't got a gun. We'll come out."

"When you do, keep those arms up," Le Blanc replied.

As he stepped into the dimly-lit corridor, Le Blanc searched him for weapons, while other officers seized Zamotel. Only two fountain pens were found on the prisoners. Gray also had a $5 bill.

"How did you get this break," asked "Bad Willie," as he was hustled down the stairs. "I suppose it was the usual tip-off, hey? They take us to a dump like this for a hide, and then turn us in. Just like feeding a couple of guys to the lions."

ADMITS SAWING BARS

Gray readily admitted his part in sawing the bars of his cell and the window, but made little reference to the plot which he had formulated weeks ago.

Zamotel, however, "opened up" soon after his arrival at headquarters and later went into more detail at the jail. Under questioning by Sheriff Keliher and Special Officers Tiernan and Hamlett, he admitted giving the hacksaws and frame to Gray and described the car driven by Weyand from the jail to the Columbus ave. rooming house.

"I stayed in my cell while Gray worked on the bar of his cell," Zamotel said. "When he got out he walked over to the window and started to work on the bars there. He stopped once in a while when he heard the guards moving around.

"After a long while he came over to me and said he couldn't go on, he was so tired. He told me to get busy on the bars and I went over and sawed the rest of them.

"He had his two bed sheets and a spread knotted up with two of my sheets and we lowered the whole business out the window. He started out first. It was hard for him to get through the space and his leg was hurting him.

"I thought he was going to fall. He was getting weak from the bad leg I guess. Finally he got through and started down. When I figured he dropped off I started out and got down pretty quick.

"I saw a car about 100 feet down toward the North Station and Gray told me that was the one we were going in. I wanted to run but Gray couldn't move very fast. Anyway we got there and there was a fellow sitting in the front seat. He was all alone.

"Gray walked up and said 'Good morning' and I helped him in. Then I got in and the guy started off. Gray didn't introduce me to him. We didn't go so very fast and not very far. We turned around on Columbus ave., and stopped in front of the joint where we were grabbed. Gray turned around to the guy driving and said it was a 'hell of a place' to bring him to. Gray said we wouldn't be out two hours in a place like that.

"The guy said, 'You do your part and we'll do ours.' Then he passed Gray the keys to the apartment and told us to go on up. He gave some us cigarettes and said he'd be back later with some clothes.

"Gray and I went up to the room. It was dark and nobody saw us. The room we got into was cold—there was no heat on—and there was no food in the room.

"Pretty soon it got light and Gray sent me down to look for newspapers that were left at the doors. I was walking around in my bare feet looking for some when a woman saw me.

"Well, I got a paper and came back and told Gray about the woman seeing me and he said that was the end of it and there was nothing to do but wait for the cops to come in and grab us.

"The guy didn't show up with the clothes and Gray said he was a rat and was double-crossing us."

"LOST NERVE" ONCE

Zamotel revealed that the break was originally planned for last Wednesday night, but that he "choked up" and didn't dare go through with it.

"I told Gray next morning I lost my nerve and he bawled me out and swore," he said. "He kept talking about it all the time and made all kinds of threats and promises till I figured I'd go through."

During his recital of the escape Zamotel made the startling announcement that Gray had planned the break the moment he was captured in New Hampshire.

"He said he figured on being sent to the jail hospital and making the break there," said the youth. "The first day he got up there he started to sound me out on it. He said he wouldn't stand a chance in state's prison and this was the last chance he had to get away."

Sheriff Keliher paid tribute to the police for rounding up the pair 19 hours after they made their escape. He praised particularly Special Officers Tiernan and Hamlett, who were awakened an hour after the break and started on the chase.

The officers held a hurried consultation and recalled the numbers of a car used frequently by Weyand and owned by "Red" Chapman, of Chelsea, former featherweight boxing champion of New England.

The number was placed on the teletype with a warning for Chelsea officers. Within an hour after Tiernan and Hamlett broadcast the numbers Weyand was arrested while driving Chapman's car in Chelsea. Samuel Lerner, following in another machine, was also taken in custody.

Under the mayor's plan Fellsway West would be extended to Forest st., thus causing a continuous flow of traffic at that point.

LABOR LEADER WARNS STATE G. O. P. CHIEF

Organized labor today demanded a showdown on the attitude of the Massachusetts G. O. P. towards the so-called "Yellow Dog" contracts.

In an open letter to Chairman Amos W. Taylor of the Republican State Committee, Robert J. Watt, representing the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, warned that labor "is no longer to be cajoled by promises which you and your party do not intend to fulfill."

"The appointment of delegates to the national convention raises an interesting question which the executive council of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor believes should be faced by your group," the communication said.

"Will the Republican party in Massachusetts this year pledge itself to a program calling for restraint of injunction in labor disputes and urge the right of collective bargaining as it did in 1928? If you do are you pledging that in coming years your platform will be lived up to in Massachusetts and not ruthlessly cast aside as it has been these past few years?"

Watt declared the time had come "to stop issuing platitudes as planks for party platforms." The action of Republican members of the Legislature in "hiding behind" an advisory opinion of the State Supreme Court, he condemned as a "betrayal of the pledge of 1928."

"We feel that it is wise for us to understand one another now," he stated. "It will save a lot of effort on the part of both organizations if we have a clear understanding n^o^w that labor is no longer to be cajoled by promises which you and your party do not intend to fulfill."

WHO can think of washing a handkerchief used during a cold, grippe, or flu, without a shudder?

And this job is not only repulsive. It's dangerous! Thousands of germs must be handled. They contaminate other clothing—spread germs wherever they touch.

It is quite unnecessary that you should expose yourself to this danger, or ask others to do so.

Use Kleenex and destroy

The modern handkerchief to use during colds is Kleenex! A soft, absorbent tissue—gentler than a handkerchief—and less expensive than laundering!

Therefore, you use it and destroy it. No self-infection. No spreading germs every time you use a handkerchief. No washing.

Kleenex is sold at all drug, dry goods and department stores.

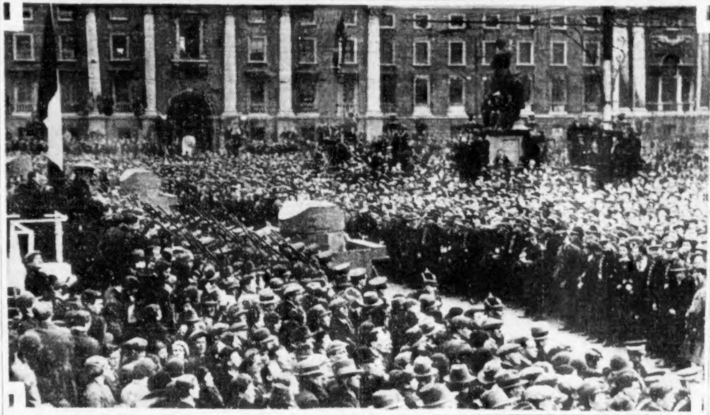
IRELAND VIEWS HER ARMY AS THERE'S TALK OF 'WAR'



Armed troops and armored cars passing the saluting base at College Green, Dublin, during the impressive St. Patrick's Day ceremonies. Note the massed humanity, the serious faces, the dozens and dozens of "bobbies" who held the crowds back in solidly-packed throngs. Since the re-election of Eamonn De Valera there has been a great revival of the spirit of nationalism. This wave of patriotism has resulted in notification of Great Britain that land annuities no longer will be paid, and the oath of allegiance no longer administered. The resultant clash between the countries still impends. (Int. News Photos.)

IRISH NOTE MAY BE TONED DOWN

Dublin, March 31 (INS)—President Eamon De Valera is encountering unexpected difficulties in compromising the divergent views of members of the executive council over the note to be sent to London on abolition of the oath of allegiance and retention of the land annuities.

A reliable source said today that, following several conferences with his legal advisers, De Valera held a private meeting last night with recalcitrants in his cabinet and asked their opinion of a revised draft of the note.

This was rejected also, because of its uncompromising tone, and as a consequence a special cabinet meeting scheduled for today to consider the reply has been postponed.

"There will be no meeting of the council today," said Gerald Boland, De Valera's parliamentary secretary and official government spokesman.

He indicated the reply would be considered at the regular Friday cabinet meeting and after approval dispatched to London.

British Expert Sees Improvement Here

New York, March 31 (AP)—Sir Josiah Stamp, economic adviser to the British government, says the economic situation in the United States is better, even though it is not yet "good enough to lean on." He also thinks a balanced budget would be a good thing.

Sir Josiah and Lady Stamp are going to Evanston, Ill., for the marriage of their son, Dr. T. C. Stamp, to Frances Bosworth, niece of Gen. Charles G. Dawes.

FISH RIDICULES BONUS MOVE

Washington, March 31 (AP)—Representative Fish (R.), New York, on leaving the White House today, said he had informed President Hoover he believed the possibilities of the adoption of new bonus legislation by the House had been shunted aside by the Chief Executive's recent statement opposing such legislation.

Fish characterized proposals by Representatives Patman (D.), Texas, and Rankin (D.), Mississippi, that new currency be issued to make new bonus payments as "too absurd to discuss."

Fish said he had told the President it was his opinion that over one-half of the veterans in the House were opposed to additional bonus legislation.

MALDEN MAN DIES BY POISON

Nathan Rubin, 35, was found dead today in the cellar of his home at 60 Linwood st., Malden, an emptied carbolic acid vial at his side.

His widow, another daughter and three sons survive. Rubin was a tailor.

HOARDING IS ON WANE IN N. E.

General improvement in business and economic conditions is noted by banks throughout the state, according to a report made today by the Citizens' Reconstruction organization supervising the anti-hoarding campaign.

Reports from over the state are definite in their statements of improvement. The campaign is in full swing and sizable sums of money are being put into circulation.

The Roxbury Co-operative Bank of Boston, one of the many banks that reported, stated:

"We can vouch for the fact that the last two or three weeks have shown a decided change in the attitude on the part of the people."

$1,000,000 Tenement for Mill Employes

Philadelphia, March 31 (AP)—Construction here early this summer of a $1,000,000 tenement development, to provide cheap, but ultra-modern, housing for hosiery mill employes, is planned by the American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers.

Homes for 324 families will be provided, union officials said, with additional units in prospect.

COURT IS SORRY WIFE MISSED

"You should have knocked him cold! It's too bad your aim wasn't better."

This was the comment today of Judge O'Brien in Lynn court to Mrs. Elizabeth Leavitt of 34 Ocean st., Lynn, after finding her husband, Frank, guilty of assault.

Mrs. Leavitt testified her husband struck her during an argument concerning the rent.

She threw plates and cups at him, but all missed their mark.

Judge O'Brien sentenced Leavitt to one month in the House of Correction. Leavitt appealed and was held in $500.

N. Y. VOTE TO BE UNPLEDGED

Washington, March 31 (AP)—The biggest block of votes in the Democratic national convention, New York State's 94, is not going to be tied up to any candidate until the very last moment before the party assembly opens in Chicago.

This was announced by John F. Curry, boss of Tammany Hall, who spoke with the assurance given by expected control of the delegation and the manner of its instruction.

Until then, he made it plain, the 94 cannot be added to Franklin D. Roosevelt's 130, nor to the Alfred E. Smith zero score which may soon boast a solid figure, nor to the votes allocated to any other candidate. To the prediction Curry added cryptic statement:

"New York had the Democratic convention in 1924. It had a candidate in 1928. New York doesn't want to hog everything."

Kellogg in Capital, but Shuns Congress

Washington, March 31 (AP)—Former Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, now a judge of the World Court, called at the State Department today to arrange visas to return to Europe next week. To inquirers who asked if he intended to visit Congress, Kellogg responded:

"No, I don't think I could add anything to the chaos on the hill."

HOOVER LAUDED AT G. O. P. MEET IN PORTLAND

Portland, Me., March 31 (AP)—The declaration that the American people "cannot desert" President Hoover if they hope to recover an even keel when the tide of affairs shall turn," was made today by Raymond Fellows of Bangor, permanent chairman of the Republican state convention.

"America will not drop the pilot in November," he continued. "There is too much at stake for all the millions in our 48 states to experiment with new and untried executives who are willing to adopt any instrument that will transport them to the presidential chair."

SEES "USUAL VICTORY."

The size of the victory is the only question, Fellows asserted in claiming the "usual victory" for the party in the state election in September.

The Republican party in the State was termed "the party of honest endeavor, conservative action and certain results."

The resolve to have all resolutions on platform referred to the committee on resolutions was adopted after Fellows ruled that it would not shut off discussion and that he would recognize anyone who wished to talk on any of the planks in the platform.

TALK OF WET REPORT.

Some of the more ardent opponents of prohibition said they expected a minority report from the committee favoring resubmission or modification.

Fellows and Mrs. George A. Wyeth, of New York, spoke at the morning session while the resolutions committee was preparing the platform.

The convention then recessed and later Seth W. Richardson, assistant United States attorney general, delivered the keynote address.

District conventions to select delegates to the national convention were held during the recess.

Mrs. Wyeth attacked the Tammany administration for corruption, condemned the Democratic party for poverty in leadership and praised the Republican party for its tariff policies, its economic relief measures and its distribution of taxation.

Taxpayers Settle on Installment Plan

The commission passed a resolution offering the privilege of paying 1932 taxes in 10 equal monthly installments.

Young Roosevelt Wins New Name of 'One-Shot Teddy'

Manila, P. I., March 31 (AP)—Governor-General Theodore Roosevelt came back to Manila today from a nine-day tour of northern Luzon island with a new nick-name, reminiscent of his famous father's reputation as a big game hunter.

The Governor was dubbed "One Shot Teddy" by members of his party. He killed a wild carabao (a water buffalo noted for its viciousness when aroused) with a single shot from 150 yards.

The trip was made primarily to study social and economic conditions of the islands, but it also included two days of hunting.

HEYBURN WEDS GRETA NISSEN

Hollywood, March 31 (INS)—The goal of all film honeymooners—privacy—had been attained today by Greta Nissen and Weldon Heyburn, players who were married in Tijuana, Mex., late yesterday.

Not even their best friends could tell where the young people are—because their best friends don't know.

Attired in a charming blue silk dress and a white hat, Miss Nissen was married in Helburn at a hotel by Judge Ricardo Gibert. Heyburn's father, Col. Wyatt S. Franks of Washington, D. C., and William Clay Silver, a newspaper man, were the witnesses.

Miss Nissen gave her real name of Grethe Rutz-Nissen, 25, and Heyburn registered as Weldon Heiburn Franks, 28.

League to Consider Economic Crises

Geneva, March 31 (INS)—An urgent summons was issued today for an extraordinary session of the League of Nations Council here April 12 to consider financial aid to Austria, Hungary, Greece and Bulgaria.

Suspension of foreign debt payments is threatened in these countries because of the economic crisis.

Terrorists Bomb Illinois Radio Studio

Chicago, March 31 (INS)—Daring terrorists today hurled a black powder bomb through a transom into the studio of radio station WHFC in Cicero and escaped.

No one was injured, but about $1200 damage was caused. The attack was attributed to enemies of political candidates speaking over WHFC.

LEGS BARED TO COURT'S GAZE

Exhibitions of bare legs, male or female, are rare in municipal court, but it was just such a rare case today when Klemis Oles of Causeway st. was arraigned on robbery charges.

The trouble started, the court was told, when Oles and Andrew Kweeka of the West End engaged in a drinking bout. Oles helped his friend home, and when they reached there, police charged, Oles set upon Kweeka and administered a terrific beating. Oles then relieved him of $7 and fled.

Oles claimed Kweeka bit him on the calf, and Attorney Illman told him to show the teethmarks. Up went his pant leg, and he exhibited several marks. Kweeka, not to be outdone, yanked up his trouser leg and showed what he purported to be teethmarks on his knee caused by Oles.

Judge Good held Oles in $3000 for the grand jury.

MYSTERY WOMAN, NEW FIGURE IN LINDY BABY HUNT, TRAILED BY POLICE

something about the case. She explained very fully what prompted her to call me and the police were satisfied."

Mrs. Hancock said she would not say why the woman selected her for the purpose of telling the story, but added it was "very interesting," and might be divulged later.

BEING INVESTIGATED

Director Kern Dodge of the Department of Public Safety said he did not care to discuss the information which the woman gave Mrs. Hancock.

"It is one of the many bits of information that have drifted into police headquarters since the start of this case, and it is being carefully investigated," he said.

Curtis flew here Saturday in a navy plane under the name of "Mr. Guy," according to reports. It was the same plane that carried the Rev. Dobson-Peacock when it landed Monday at the navy yard field here because of bad flying weather.

Beyond the bare admission that his contact with the five men with whom he had been bargaining for return of the child had been established, Curtis declined to reveal his movements.

UNDER SURVEILLANCE

The meeting between Mrs. Hancock and her unidentified visitor was the result of a contact established a week ago, according to Director of Public Safety Kern Dodge, who bared this phase of the local angle.

At that time the mysterious visitor asked Mrs. Hancock if she knew of any friends of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh who resided in this city. Mrs. Hancock replied she did not. The visitor asked for an interview. Since that time sha has been under constant surveillance, Dodge said.

Dodge refused to reveal the conversation between the two women. He insisted it was too early to determine if there was any definite value to that angle of the case.

Burrage Evasive at Question Barrage

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Corespondent

Norfolk, Va., March 31 (INS)—Rear-Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, acting as "spokesman" for the three prominent Norfolk men negotiating for the return of the Lindbergh baby, today answered in an evasive manner the barrage of questions designed to draw from him the latest developments.

His interview with 40 newspaper reporters served to accentuate the mystery shrouding the Norfolk stage of the drama.

Admiral Burrage said that neither he nor his two colleagues, Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock and John Curtis, local shipbuilder, had seen the kidnapers or their representatives in the last 24 hours.

ADMITS CONTACTS

He declined to reveal what new moves, if any, are being made.

He was asked if it was not a fact that Curtis, who established the original contact with the supposed kidnapers, had not in the last day or two been in communication in person, by telephone, by radio, or in some other manner with a responsible lieutenant of the leader of the kidnapers.

"Nothing can be accomplished without contact with the kidnapers," was his reply.

At Admiral Burrage's request the questions today were submitted to him in writing.

These questions were:

1—Have you, Dean Dobson-Peacock, or Mr. Curtis, seen any representatives of the kidnapers since yesterday?

2—Has any arrangement been made for a new contact or is any such arrangement in prospect?

4—Is any new move planned?

5—Is it true that the go-between for the supposed kidnapers has failed to keep recent appointments?

"The answer to all four questions is—No," said Admiral Burrage.

Admiral Burrage combined questions No. 3 and 11.

Question No. 3—Has Mr. Curtis made any trip outside the city since yesterday afternoon?

ABOUT BABY'S HEALTH

11—Does Col. Lindbergh plan to make a visit to Norfolk?

"I don't know," was Burrage's answer.

Questions Nos. 6, 7, 8 and 9 were grouped. They were:

6—Assuming that you have lost contact with the kidnapers, is there prospects that you will be able to resume contact soon?

7—The whole country is anxious regarding the welfare and health of the Lindbergh baby. Is the baby well? What assurance have the supposed kidnapers given that they are taking care of the baby?

8—Is a woman involved in the negotiations? Is she taking care of the child?

9—How many more visits to Col. Lindbergh are likely to be necessary before it is possible to convince him that the baby is his?

"We cannot answer," the admiral declared.

He then grouped questions Nos. 10 and 12.

10—Is there any hope that the negotiations will be concluded within the next four or five days?

PUBLICITY HAMPERS

11—Have the group with whom you are negotiating ever been able to submit any tangible evidence that they have the Lindbergh baby or do they just tell you they have it?

"Impossible to answer," replied Admiral Burrage.

The Admiral reiterated that in his opinion publicity is hampering the negotiations.

He was asked this question:

"In view of the statement of Mr. Curtis that the naval plane in which he made a trip last Saturday and Sunday landed in Philadelphia, what significance is there to the Philadelphia angle?"

"The Philadelphia landing field is near Hopewell," replied Burrage.

U. S. Sleuths at Hopewell on Secret Investigation

Hopewell, N. J., March 31—With Department of Justice men arriving here early this week, special significance is now seen in the concentration of a number of investigators for the Department of Labor in the same area.

Murray Garsson, assistant to the Secretary of Labor, in charge of this latter contingent, refused to admit or deny whether special work in the Lindbergh case was carried on.

But his quest for deportable aliens was interpreted by many as a suspicion some members of a vast alien smuggling ring may have been involved in the stealing of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Since a day or so after the kidnaping the entire force of government sleuths, Department of Justice, Immigration Bureau, Post Office Department, have been working night and day.

After running down a thousand "clues" into a blind alley, they are concentrating on known angles.

One of these is the belief that possibly Betty Gow, pretty young Scotch nursemaid of baby Lindbergh, innocently holds the key to the crime.

She has listed for the government men every place she can remember going. She has listed every person, friend or stranger, with whom she can remember associating. She has listed everything she can remember telling anybody about her work in the Lindbergh household.

Who were the men or women to whom she talked who appeared most interested in her charge?

Did she think she might have been "pumped" by this one or that one?

Her mother, in Glasgow, told of Betty writing her that she wanted to leave the Lindberghs, that she had "misgivings," but that Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh persuaded her to stay. This letter was written before the kidnaping.

Betty has explained but of course, these government men do not talk.

Henry "Red" Johnson, sailor sweetheart of Betty, is still held by immigration authorities for illegal entry to this country. Johnson, like Betty, appears anxious to aid the authorities on the theory that something which might have been said in a casual conversation regarding the Lindbergh home provided a "tip off" to the kidnapers.

Col. Schwarzkopf, head of the state police, said today in his morning bulletin that several children investigated yesterday were found to have no connection with the case.

In one instance a child was reported being kept under "very suspicious circumstances" in a camp in the Catskill Mountains near Kingston, N. Y. The circumstances reported indicated that the child had never been seen in the vicinity before the first of March.

Turn in Case Seen Today by Hibben

Trenton, N. J., March 31 (INS)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh today are unwavering in their steadfast, burning faith their kidnaped baby will be restored to them safely, and soon.

This revelation was made to friends by Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, friend of the "Lone Eagle" and a frequent caller at the white house atop Sourland Mountain, from which the infant was abducted March 1.

Hibben added that he expected a turn in the case today.

Whether such expectation was based on developments in Norfolk, Va., where Lindbergh's three prominent emissaries believed their efforts to communicate with the kidnapers were near a climax, or the renewed official investigations by federal forces in the Hopewell, N. J., area, was not disclosed.

100,000 Lindbergh Notices in Mexico

Mexico City, March 31 (AP)—Police distributed 100,000 police bulletins throughout Mexico on the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby. The folders, patterned after those issued at Hopewell, N. J., with the baby's picture, but with the text in Spanish, were sent to remotest parts of the country for distribution.

It was said this is the first time such a thing has been done in Mexico.

Theories of Readers

"Inside job"—"Capone"—"Ransom"—"Revenge"—What is your theory in the Lindbergh kidnaping?

Following are more excerpts from letters of Boston Evening American readers to the Lindbergh Case Editor:

TWO IN PLOT

"There was one kidnaper, who had aid from one servant inside the house, in my opinion. This servant handed the baby to the kidnaper when he climbed the ladder. The kidnaper set only one foot in the room. If there had been an outside accomplice the ladder would have been taken. The chisel was to make it look like an inside job"—William A. C. Appettofft, Sharon.

WHY THE UNDERWORLD

"Why ask the underworld to solve this crime? Hasn't Lindbergh enough faith in the police of his country? Police have solved bigger crimes than this"—A High School Student, Boston.

A SERVANT

"I think one of those servants and an outside friend did it for ransom and planned to go to England. I think this servant should be further questioned."—Sam Short, Somerville.

OUTSPOKEN

"I think the Rev. Dobson-Peacock is being played for a sucker. The real kidnapers would never dilly-dally back and forth if Lindbergh is really ready to pay. The quicker they get it over with the better and safer for them. I think that if one of the real rulers of this country (who, owing to some mistake, is now in jail) were liberated, the child would be at once returned."—J. Kennedy, Elm st., Manchester.

PURPLE GANG

"I believe the Purple gang of Detroit have the child. If ships were searched the police would find him—Joseph Stanley, 857 Cambridge st., Cambridge.

NOT DOWN LADDER

"It was an inside job. I don't think the baby was taken down the ladder at all. The ladder rungs are too far apart for anyone carrying a baby to attempt."—J. S., Bellows Falls, Vt.

Note to Dr. J. Richards Ginn, 80 Boylston st.—Thanks. Had seen it before. Rather a strange, regrettable coincidence.—Ed.

What Is Your Theory?

What is your theory of the Lindbergh kidnaping puzzle which has aroused the entire world, and which has baffled the collected police talent of the entire nation? Your theory is as good as anyone's at this time. Send your idea to the Lindbergh Case Editor, the Boston Evening American.

FATHER COUGHLIN TALKS TO WOMEN On Love, Marriage And the Home

Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, who speaks to women of New England through the Boston Evening American, is a pianist as well as a preacher. He is shown trying out a sacred song for his choristers at Royal Oak, Mich., as Miss Ruth Mugglebee, of the Evening American staff, looks on.

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American—All Rights Reserved.

Royal Oak, Mich., March 31—From the radio priest, Father Charles E. Coughlin, came this observation on women from his extended views:

"They don't belong in politics. The country doesn't need them in politics. Politics belittles women who preach its tenets from platform or senatorial forum."

In other words, Father Coughlin doesn't favor that branch of American life which brings womanhood into argument with man on man's plane

And as he said:

"I don't like colds. I don't like pneumonia. Nor do I like undertakers. But I must admit they are necessary things. And I can only excuse woman's entrance into politics as a necessary evil."

We had just viewed the priceless piece of statuary placed in the Crucifixion Tower revealing the Blessed Virgin holding the child Jesus as He passed to the Little Flower, St. Therese, a flower that she might pass it down to earth.

It was a glorious statuary of beautiful womanhood, feminine simplicity, gracious softness.

To picture woman as a cold, calculating mortal bartering in material things on material valuations was a disagreeable consideration for the pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower.

"Men need woman's loveliness of heart; not her political design in government," Father Coughlin observed.

Cites Jews' Example

Women Not Slaves, But Above Law-Making

"And so, I say," he continued, "that I don't like it at all woman's going into the political arena to pit her scientific comprehension of material things. Woman is above politics idealistically.

"She is completely beyond her element when she vies for political honors with men in the ruling and governing of nations. Her job is not to make laws but to influence rightly the men who should make them.

"The Jews did not keep women in slavery, subservient to man's will, as is believed. Rather the Jews held their woman above law-making when they refused to permit them to participate in the forms of politics."

For that matter, Father Coughlin doesn't like to see women smoke. Somehow or other, it lowers woman from the lofty pinnacle to which in his imagination he has carried her.

"I am old-fashioned about that, I suppose," he added. "But I don't like to see women trying to be like men, trying to do the things men do, trying to act like them, work like them and live like them. I want always to think that woman is better than man, more finely attuned with the universe, more delicate in thought and purpose.

"In politics she cannot retain that certain something so delightfully feminine, so graciously charming. She must fight and fight and argue."

As for politics, generally, Father Coughlin is neither a Republican, a Democrat nor a Socialist. Some day he hopes to see formed a great American party—a party for real Americans, a party not defined by this or that platform, but a party designed by Americans for Americans.

Woman's Big Career

It Is in the Home, But There Are Exceptions

As for careers for women——

"Well, yes and no," he answered. "There is always that group for whom a career is necessary. But for womanhood generally, motherhood and wifehood should be the greatest career.

"I am not strong altogether for co-education," he commented. "But this industrial age has made it necessary for the girl to also earn her daily bread by the sweat of her own brow. So why condemn?"

But if Father Coughlin denies woman a place in politics or in a career that will contaminate her with masculinity, he does not approve of those women who idle away precious hours in making of insignificant past-time a chief interest.

"I have no use for those women who are no more useful than to play bridge and discuss the next theatrical production; who can tell you the color of hair and eyes of the most popular matinee idol; or who can idolize and lionize screen stars. And who make of such folly an earnest passion.

"I play bridge, but for diversion. And so should it be with all people. A pleasant pastime, and nothing more. But there are women who devote all their time and energies to sitting at one of the four corners of the bridge tables, with an unbecoming concentration and over-proportioned interest.

"In pagan literature we read of the women who remained at home by their spinning wheels while their husbands went out to conquer.

His Placid Life

With Two Holy Associates He's Out of Hurly-Burly

"How many of our princesses today would stay at home and spin? Patiently waiting? Patiently hoping for husband's return?"

That life is becoming unbearingly overpowerful, Father Coughlin would not deny. Neither would he deny that there must be a return to simple living and appreciation of simple pleasures.

All his life, Father Coughlin has pursued simply, though persistently, the scholastics.

And even today with the many demands of his popularity he continues to live quietly and calmly.

With Father John and Father Tully, his assistants, he occupies the rectory house, a few blocks from the parish Shrine of the Little Flower. Of course there is "Pal," Father Coughlin's great Dane.

"And Pal is part of the institution," he added.

We had talked for quite some time, Father and I, but always he came back to his major premise. To wit:

"Woman primarily belongs in the home."

And then he went to the opposite extreme. He talked of emancipated women. And the idea that "it is a wild philosophy that dictates that man must sow his wild oats."

"What's good for man, is also good for women," he paused.

(Father Coughlin talks about the blind pigs and their hurdy gurdy and cheap "set-ups" for the younger generation to frequent—prohibition's step-children—in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Treasury Balance $676,607,442 March 29

Washington, March 31 (AP)—Treasury receipts for March 29 were $4,865,479.43; expenditures $9,574,810.64; balance $676,607,442.62. Customs duties for 29 days of March were $21,930,304.01.

PLAN TO PUSH ROADS BILL

Washington, March 31 (AP)—A determined effort by Democratic senators to force action on the House bill for a $135,000,000 emergency road construction program is to be made as soon as the pending tariff is voted.

The road measure is a Democratic project for relieving unemployment by making possible state road construction entirely with federal funds. The bill carries $120,000,000 to match available regular federal aid allocations, the new funds to be repaid by the states gradually out of future federal aid money. Some Republicans have predicted its veto, if passed.

When it comes up, Senator Wagner (D.), New York, intends to try amending it to add his $375,000,000 direct relief bill. This, like the La Follette-Costigan measure, which was defeated, differs in that it provides for reimbursement to the federal government. The money would be used by the states for the unemployed.

WE WISH YOU HAD ALL BEEN WITH US YESTERDAY to meet that most charming of English actresses, Miss Constance Collier, who is appearing at the Plymouth Theater in Noel Coward's play, "Hay Fever."

• • •

She has the most magnetic personality and her voice is a thing of beauty, a joy forever.

• • •

We were assembled at the Women's Republican Club for luncheon and the quiet dignity of the dark-panelled, lofty dining room suited the occasion.

• • •

KATHERINE PARKER

At the head table Miss Collier was seated with Miss Rebekah Hobbs, whom you all know by this time through this column . . . if not through the Professional Players . . . Mrs. Olive Higgins Prouty . . . of course, you remember Stella Dallas and others . . . Katherine Parker, the very attractive president of the club . . . Katherine Lyons . . . and what was she doing at the head table while the rest of us press sat in a corner . . . Mr. Goodman, the author of "If Booth Had Missed," and what a charmer HE is . . . Professor Dana . . . authority on European drama and other important things . . . and Mr. Goodnow, the able manager of one of our favorite rendezvous, the Copley Theater.

Star Talked of Her Childhood Days

IN ASHES OF ROSES CREPE COSTUME, VERY PARISIAN, topped with a real Empress Eugenie in wine red . . . and how she can wear it . . . Miss Constance Collier talked most intimately and interestingly of her youth and career. We were so enthralled that we allowed our chop to get cold . . . and ate aspirins all afternoon as punishment.

• • •

It seemed so nice to hear someone talk about her childhood days in language we understand. Confidentially, we are glad that our mother never read Winnie the Pooh to us between five and six every evening . . . but we would never dare to say so in polite society.

Her Life

MISS COLLIER'S LIFE OF A strolling player with other "rogues and vagabonds" . . . as the English term theatrical folk . . . pleased us much better. Poverty, luck, discouragement, ambition, work, play, we can feel with her in that.

• • •

Rebekah Hobbs

SHE SAID one thing which we believe most sincerely . . . but which it is hard to adhere to in a world of standardized rules for everything . . . she said that the best things we do come from within ourselves. How we know that and how difficult it is to keep on doing OUR way when all the world is telling us there are 57 varieties of better ways to do everything. (Especially in writing this column.)

Criticism

"BE CAREFUL WHOM YOU allow to criticize you," she told us. At one time in her career she mentioned how criticism from well-intentioned friends and reviewers had made the way very difficult for her. We adored the dispassionate way in which she brought back her past for our entertainment . . . and we felt a real sympathetic spark of comradely understanding for the lessons she has learned so magnificently.

Faintly Amused

WE WERE FAINTLY amused when her maid stepped up behind her during the lunch and put a few eye-drops in her eye, which has been troubling her since the beginning of this engagement. As we knew there were a few Christian Scientists in our midst, we felt they must have been laying down on their job at that moment. This is not intended as a joke . . . we have seen them perform miracles before our very eyes.

Tribute to Mother

MISS COLLIER SPOKE very sweetly of her actress-mother, who no doubt was a great help and inspiration to her in her career. She was taught Shakespeare's plays at the age of nine and while we have never seen her in them, isn't she just the person whom you would pick as the heroine in Lady Macbeth, or Portia?

Friend of Coward's

CAN YOU IMAGINE BEING on intimate terms with Noel Coward? That would surely be the height of OUR ambition. Well, Miss Collier knows him well, in fact she was present at his first success, a play, "The Vortex"; he sobbed in her arms after its presentation, he was so happy. Another enlightening and awfully interesting fact she told us, which concerned one of our secretly favorite loves . . . Michael Arlen. Did you know that he was the man who financed Mr. Coward's first play? Neither did we, and wasn't it a perfectly splendid thing for one artist to do for a fellow-artist?

Her Inspiration

ONE THING MORE SHE left with us . . . a phrase of William Shakespeare's, which has inspired her always . . . "The readiness is all" . . . If you are ready for it, the big moment always comes . . . opportunity is just around the corner. Are you getting ready for YOUR big moment?

• • •

WELL, WE HAD A BIG MOMENT when we met Miss Collier today, and "Hay Fever" is a play you will all enjoy.

Ushers' Dinner

HOWARD ELLIOTT IS HAVING his ushers' dinner in Boston the night before his marriage to Justine Prince, April 15. We hear there are 24 ushers and that some of his father's friends among the older set have been invited to attend him . . . Wasn't that a thoughtful thing to do. Great boy, Howard!

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

That amazing woman, Gertrude Atherton, has written exactly the kind of autobiography one had hoped she would write. She has let herself go; and if she is unsparing of others, it cannot be said she has spared herself. Her torrential style never poured itself out on the printed page with better effect. There is a brilliance, an audacity here that is refreshing after so many books written softly and serenely of bygone days.

"Adventures of a Novelist" (Liveright) is a volume that will be discussed around every dinner table this season. I defy you, beginning it, to lay it down. I would come to the end of a chapter, peep at the opening of the next, and find myself racing on, caught in the vortex of those crisp, lashing sentences.

I was astonished, surprised, smiling by turns; for Mrs. Atherton has the sharp, caustic wit of the woman of the world, and her fiction gift makes it easy for her to tell an anecdote, squeezing every vestige of juice out of it, bringing it up gloriously to an O. Henry royal finish. As when, for instance, she tells of a visit she once made to Monte Carlo with an American man in the Consulate, and feared, through a dire happening, that she would find herself the protagonist in an international scandal.

The ending of that tale, written with all the relish of the born storyteller, has a twist at the end which could not be matched. Yet every word of it is obviously true. It takes no little courage to set such an episode down. For the joke might have been so tragically on Mrs. Atherton.

And there is the story of her one encounter with Ambrose Bierce, and how, though she admired the man's talents, she was inflamed by his egotism, and found herself quarreling with him one whole long Sunday afternoon. Finally . . . But the story must be read in its entirety, not mutilated by a mere reviewer; for it swings to a humorous climax.

• • •

Mrs. Atherton begins with her childhood in California, and sweeps us to New York, where she was determined to get a glimpse of the upper Bohemian life she had read about. Her meeting with a certain woman who held forth in a cheap salon, and her refusal to court her tawdry favor, makes engaging reading. It is as dramatic as that short story by Somerset Maugham on a similar theme.

The young writer had gone to New York to meet the publishers and editors, to bombard them and prove to them that she had manuscripts worthy of their attention. She failed; but she was not frightened. The capitals of Europe claimed her. She had been left a widow (and she tells of her married life with splendid candor); and she had a little patrimony.

In England she was received with open arms, as a symbol of the new literary America; and though "Patience Sparhawk" had been rejected by several American publishers, John Lane had the courage to bring it out, though he kept the book two years in his safe before he gave it to a waiting world. Undeterred, Mrs. Atherton plunged into another novel forthwith.

The William Sharps had taken her under their wing; she was to meet everybody of consequence. But she was not a celebrity—yet; she was more a type, a figure that commanded attention. Henry James, at their first meeting, bored her; so did the mother of Oscar Wilde; so did Thomas Hardy.

But London thrilled and inspired her, and she made it a habit to go there for the season, to penetrate the inner circles of society, and study the British aristocracy. All this was grist to her mill. She knew that a career awaited her; but she speaks of those long, arid periods of time when a plot would not evolve in her head, and she feared that her fiction gift was slowly but surely dying.

Then, through some chance remark she had heard, or some paragraph she had read in a paper, a new idea would burst into her brain, and she would rush to her desk and write furiously until a book was finished.

• • •

She wandered from capital to capital; to Germany, to Greece, to Paris. Then back to America, to work in such out-of-the-way places as Helena and Butte. Her energy was boundless; she was avid of life, and the pageant of existence swept by her in kaleidoscopic fashion. She missed nothing. She says that she often felt like one aloof from the eternal scene, yet definitely of it. She also truthfully confesses that she doubts if she was ever in love with anyone. Her art came first, always.

She recalls vividly the earthquake of 1904 in San Francisco. Her experiences in the World War are flamingly reported; and she tells how a seed planted in her mind in girlhood grew, later, into a flowering tree that gave us "The Conqueror."

• • •

The English love a lord. How, then, will they look upon Mrs. Atherton's daring expose of many a morsel of scandal and intrigue within the sacred precincts of Mayfair? She is pitiless in her condemnation, but one must admire her courage. People fascinated her everywhere, and no one fooled her.

She likes "Tower of Ivory" better than any of her novels; she looks upon "Sisters-in-Law" as sagging in the middle. Which goes to prove what a fine self-critic she is. But one thing I am certain of: "Adventures of a Novelist" is the best book she has ever given us.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

BY LOUIS SOBOL

A Modern Miracle!

Now here is a story that is no part of Broadway, but I believe it will interest you just as it has interested me. It has to do with a stalwart young chap named Eddie Jansen, who is well known in the Northwest. He's the Ted Husing of radio circles out there, being one of the more prominent announcers from station XVI in Tacoma, Wash. A deep resonant voice is his and his quick, vivid and comprehensive descriptions are a by-word out there, I've been given to understand. So much for the fellow as he is today. Only a few years ago, he was a bedridden invalid without the use of his legs, one of his arms and most of his body from the neck down; the result of infantile paralysis. Doctors could do nothing for him and the outlook was bleak for this young chap who, until he was afflicted, had been active and ambitious. Only one medical man saw some hope for him. His hope was based on a study of the case of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt who, through swimming exercises, year after year, had regained practically all his physical faculties. But Jansen didn't know how to swim and if he did, how could he manage with paralyzed legs, a useless arm and a body that was almost 90 per cent dead? Jansen had a girl, a beautiful creature to whom he was betrothed to wed. She couldn't swim. And neither could his doctor. Nevertheless something had to be done. So the girl learned to swim and the doctor learned to swim, and between them they used to carry Jansen out to the rough waters of Puget Sound to battle the waves. I don't intend to tell you th. painful struggle of the lad, the heartbreaking rebuffs, the time after time when he decided that it was no use. Something in his makeup drove him on. Gradually his body developed. The use of his legs came back slowly. His arm moved. He regained control of his muscles. Month after month, day in and day out, he kept at it. The most remarkable piece of perseverance I've ever heard. In three years this lad, from a hopeless paralytic, has become a tall, broad shouldered, stalwart athlete, full of the zest of life.

A few weeks ago he came to New York for a brief visit. A friend of his had discussed the remarkable recovery with an eminent surgeon who expressed an eager desire to meet him. There was reason for that. The surgeon's son is also a victim of infantile paralysis and at 21 seems doomed to spend the remainder of his days in a wheel chair. Medical experts from East and West, even from Europe, have been called in to consider his case. None has been able to do anything for him. And so the surgeon's son and young Jansen met and Jansen told his story. Now I'm waiting to see whether the local lad will have the will power to struggle against his affliction as Jansen did—and if he does, I'm eager to follow his progress.

The Sixth Sense!

In Yonkers there is a school for the blind with girl students ranging in age from nine to 19. Amusement for these sightless children is of vital importance, and radio, you can readily believe, has proved an untold blessing. These girls, like normal girls, have their air favorites. So it will probably please Rudy Vallee to learn that a few weeks ago when a 13-year-old lass was stricken with fever, she cried out in her delirium for Vallee. But the crooner was out West and there was no way of soothing the girl by having him come to her bedside. So, as a final resort, an entertainer who resembles Vallee somewhat and whose voice and mannerisms are almost identical with the crooner's was asked to come. Song after song he chanted for her, while she held on to his hand. He talked to her soothingly. He promised to autograph a picture for her. It was a harmless deception—and in this case a constructive one. But the girl passed her hand up to his face and felt of his mouth and his nose suddenly drew away from him, weeping bitterly. "You are not Rudy Vallee," she sobbed. "You are not Rudy Vallee."

This story will probably thrill Vallee but I have a personal thrill, too. For I have learned that the Broadway column conducted by your Mister Sobol is translated daily into Braille for these youngsters to read.

With a Moral, Perhaps!

And now for a story of Wall Street. Two of the most prominent men in the Financial Street are involved and I'll guarantee you that at least 90 per cent of the brokers will know whom I mean. One of them was a partner in a highly successful and prominent Wall Street firm. The other was associated with the partner, handling a great deal of his business and the firm's.

They were pals. He fell in love with his friend's wife, inspired her to divorce him, had his own wife divorce him, and then the two were married. Whereupon the partner turned about and married the other fellow's wife. Under the circumstances, you'd think there was nothing to prevent them from remaining friends since apparently it was a fair exchange. But they became bitter enemies and the first chap was forced to go into business for himself. He prospered until the crash. And then he lost every sou. Things went from bad to worse, but he had too much pride to approach his former friend and ask for help. The latter, however, learning of his plight, called for him and said: "You took my wife from me. I married your wife. We can never be friends again. But for the sake of my wife who was once yours, and for the sake of your wife, who was once mine, I can't let you sink." And so he restored him to his former footing with the firm and now everybody's happy. Ask anybody in Wall Street whom I mean and they'll tell you.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The Bostonians, once famous as New England's principal representative in the field of light opera, entered upon a season of reincarnation at the Boston Opera House last evening. New faces, of course, smiled across the footlights; new tunes filled the big auditorium and tickled a friendly ear. A revival of Sigmund Romberg's always popular "The New Moon" was the opening attraction, and if signs count for anything at all, which they should, this last quarter of the theatrical semester seems destined to be packed with fun, melody and pleasant entertainment.

* * *

The qualities of "The New Moon" have already been amply tested. The romantic flavor of old New Orleans, of the days when Louisiana was still a French colony, hover over the story. There are nobles and colonists, and even bondsmen, to lift a hearty voice in song or swing a pirate's cutlass. A good, stirring narrative moves along in proper cadence to Mr. Romberg's excellent tunes. Melodrama with music has never had a better chance to assert itself; operatic romance has never enjoyed gayer flights or sailed stormier seas. With all these advantages it was natural that the rejuvenated Bostonians should be warmly welcomed and given a friendly slap on the shoulder.

Charlotte Lansing

If your ear has sympathy for lilting melody, you may disregard everything except the Romberg score and still make it a fairly complete evening. Still there is a good deal to be said for the story. It fairly seethes with cunning intrigue, with romance and with bold, bad men, who sing a good deal better than they fight, but who fight rather well at that.

* * *

An audience that in most respects had the color and dimension of a first night gathering at the opera gave full encouragement to the performance. Charlotte Lansing, almost a newcomer in these regions, made an excellent impression as the impetuous Marianne, and Michael Bartlett rang true as the lad who loved a lass and who seemed quite willing to wade through fire and song to win her. Miss Lansing's best number, of course, was "Lover Come Back to Me," a song that still takes time and credit on radio programs. Mr. Bartlett, as the elusive bondsman and whilom pirate, acted with discretion and sang in good voice, although somewhat outdistanced as a vocalist by William O'Neil, a brawny lad of masterful manner.

There were dancers, too, to make the night merry, and the entertainment varied. Louise Brown, who is no stranger to the local theater, was gayly received. She responded with a sensational dance number. Harry K. Morton and Zella Russell divided what honors you may properly inscribe to comedy and made a good job of it, while Cortez and Peggy danced through several intervals in the good old Spanish fashion.

This presentation of "The New Moon" matched in detail all that the Messrs. Shuberts or Mr. Romberg could have demanded of the original production. In the quaint, but important, item known as ensemble, it probably exceeded in voice and number anything the piece has ever known. And we are told that its chorus is strictly local.

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE THEATERS' NEW MENUS

The "stars," who all appear in a specially constructed stage set, include: Dok Eisenbourg, orchestra conductor, and the WNAC studio orchestra; Hum and Strum, singers; Adrian O'Brien, popular tenor; The Gossipers, comedy team on the air; George Wheeler and Emily McKenzie, singing duo; Jane McGrew, star of Hank Simmons' "Show Boat;" Guiseppe Gozzi, described as the opera "find" of the season; Jaysnoff Sisters, piano duet; Dorean Glover "the dream girl" of song; Kay, Kris and Brownie, whose singing is on the type of the Boswell Sisters; Irwin Cowper, one of the best liked radio announcers in New England.

Morton Downey Toils Hard for One of Highest Salaries

By HARRIS MORGAN

Stars today make 10 times more money than the headliners of 15 years ago, but they have to do three men's work to earn it. That is the statement made by Morton Downey, "golden-voiced tenor" who appears in person at the Keith-Boston beginning Saturday. It may be added that Downey gets one of the highest salaries in showdom today.

In spite of the juicy pay check he gets each week for his various stage, radio and night club activities, Downey claims that the money is not exorbitant considering the demands made upon not only himself, but all the stars in the new era of show business.

Morton Downey

"If you had to work as many as five shows a day, make a couple of broadcasts and a personal appearance or two, then talk to a dozen interviewers, you'd think the same thing, too," asserted the singer. "This type of work is such a heavy strain on a star's time and health that he is lucky if he can see his family once a month and not suffer a physical break-down between engagements. But if you have an Irish sense of humor and the stage fever, you can't break away from it."

Downey's daily schedule is so busy that he hasn't much time for much philosophizing. He does four shows a day at the theater, confers with radio officials by telephone many times, rehearses new tunes continually, broadcasts at 7:45 and again at 11:45, snatches a 15-minute rest after the midnight broadcast, and then rehearses for one hour for the following night's air programs. And on top of all that he is making definite plans for a forthcoming moving picture engagement.

Rosa Ponselle Proud of Age

Rosa Ponselle, celebrated Metropolitan Opera soprano, who makes her first Boston appearance in several seasons at Symphony Hall next Sunday afternoon at 3:30, is one member of her sex who has no hesitancy about revealing her age.

Rosa Ponselle

"Yes," she said recently, "I'm 34 and proud of it. And I don't actually feel a day older than that proud day when I made my opera debut at the age of 22."

Miss Ponselle, who confided that all she lacks is a husband and children, is a New England product, having been born in Meriden, Ct.

As a child Rosa's childish pipings became the subject of comment on the part of the neighbors. She was always singing, whether at play or helping her mother with the dishes. Her first step toward the heights upon which she now stands was a job in a Meriden "nickelodeon." Next, a New Haven hotel engaged her at $50 a week.

Sari Maritza to Star in 'Cloudy With Showers' for Paramount

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, March 31—Sari Maritza has been in Hollywood so long without making a picture, Paramount will have to start exploiting her all over again. She has become almost a myth now. Perhaps it's appropriate then that her initial picture should be "Cloudy With Showers," for the play, like Miss Maritza, has been in the family for months without anything being done about it.

Louella O. Parsons

Roland Young, who sailed away to make a picture in London and who is due back here in June, will play opposite Miss Maritza. When Paramount bought "Cloudy With Showers," it was intended for Fredric March and Claudette Colbert.

Probably Mr. Young and Miss Maritza will be a better combination. Certainly Mr. Young will be very good as the school master who is brought into compromising situations through no fault of his own.

The Style Changes

Six months ago our most energetic Hollywood producers were looking for Swedish actresses on Greta Garbo's type and German fräuleins with Marlene Dietrich's beauty. The style, without any apparent reason, has suddenly switched to English actresses. Carl Laemmle, Jr., returns with a gleam in his eye. He has signed Margaret Lindsey young English actress who appeared in "Death Takes a Holiday." If she is half as good as Junior believes, we will be hearing of her next year. William Daly young stage actor, has also been signed, and that isn't the half of it. Junior returns with the screen rights to [illegible] "[illegible] at Law" and "The [illegible]."

Eddie to Em Cee

A new face on the United Artists' lot. Al Rogell, well-known director, has been signed to direct Eddie Cantor in "The Kid From Spain." Eddie starts work immediately; but work or no work, he has promised to appear April 9 at the benefit for the Los Angeles Sanitarium in Universal City. Mrs. Sadie Halper, sister of Jack Warner, is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Another New Face

Two weeks ago David Selznick told me he had signed Zita Johann, well known New York actress, to make a picture for Radio. At that time he had no story in mind for her. "She needs a special type of role," he told me, "and we are not going to make the mistake of miscasting an actress that promises so much." Yesterday the papers were signed for "Thirteen Women" for Miss Johann.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The high priestess of the Dominoes, LUCILE GLEASON, putting over their second birthday party at the Ambassador in great style. DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR., and JOAN CRAWFORD making one of their few personal appearances together. GENEVIEVE TOBIN and UNA MERKEL helping receive the 700 Domino guests. CLARENCE BROWN and DOROTHY BURGESS, Hollywood's most consistent "company keepers," interesting the Domino guests by dancing every dance together. The ROBERT WOOLSEYS guests of ROSCOE ARBUCKLE at Stark's Bohemian Cafe. ROSCOE as master of ceremonies worked hard to entertain and succeeded. EDMUND LOWE and SOL WURTZEL, Fox bidders before EDDIE left that studio, at the Bohemian for a few moments. FLORENCE STRAUSS dashing off to New York after a brief stay in California. VIRGINIA CHERRILL lunching with WILLIAM RHINELANDER STEWART at the Brown Derby. —By JOHN P. MEDBURY—

Hollywood, March 31—I won't mention any names, but he's the son of a late millionaire and, when his father died, the old man left him enough money with which to drink himself to death, but the local bootleggers cut the gin so thin that he's gone through his inheritance without getting any results and now he's afraid he's going to starve.

5 Buffaloes Die in Battle for Freedom

Ponca City, Okla., March 31 (AP)—Five of the famous 101 Ranch buffaloes have perished because they wanted to be free.

Fred Clarke, ranch receiver, said the shaggy beasts killed themselves in a spectacular battle royal when they were corralled by cowboys for shipment after a stampede yesterday. Col. Zack Miller, former owner of the herd, declared he believed the buffaloes were run to death by "green hands."

Mrs. Rogers' Self-Squelching 'Butt' Dream Realized

Washington, March 31 (AP)—With the aid and encouragement of Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts, the Bureau of Standards is out to prove to the world the practicability of a self-extinguishing cigarette stub.

Mrs. Rogers started the idea four years ago. She definitely does not like the fire hazard of cigarette ends.

The bureau sent men out on sidewalks and in halls and in the woods to observe the cigarette in the wild stub state. It developed a treatment which caused the cigarette to go out as soon as thrown away at the inch and a quarter length, but would not mar its previous puffability.

Now Dr. Lyman Briggs, acting director of the bureau, has written Mrs. Rogers that all there is to do is to find a manufacturer to take up the idea.

THIS IS LIFE

IT'S GETTING SO THAT IF A MAN HOLDS TO A VIEW HE'S CALLED INSANE!

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

A TINY PARAGRAPH in a morning paper caught my eye. The story was common enough, not very important. A man had died and left his money as he wished to leave it. An assorted lot of cousins, first, second, third and fourth, were trying to break the will, trying to prove unsound mind, undue influence, and all that sort of thing.

PROF. ROGERS

It interested me to see that nowadays apparently, they do not worry about proving actual insanity, veritably unsound mind. They were trying to prove "eccentricity." And the witness who was trying to prove that, was quoted as follows

"Mr. Blank testified that Mr. Soandso was very eccentric. He said that Mr. Soandso had had very positive views on various subjects and stubbornly clung to his views."

The inference being that therefore he was unfit to make a will. I ask you!

Man Must Assert Himself

Nearly 75 years ago John Stuart Mill in his never-to-be-too-often read "Essay on Liberty" gave his opinion that it is becoming too standardized in modern civilization. As we look back on the literature of that period, particularly the fiction that describes man as he is, we cannot help feeling that, compared to us of today, the Victorian was a highly individual, not to say, eccentric person.

Yet Mill felt so greatly the dangers of conformity that he quoted and emphasized those words of von Humboldt, the German philosopher, which we may very well take to heart today

"The chief end of man is the highest and most harmonious development of his powers to a complete and consistent whole. The object toward which every human being must ceaselessly direct his efforts and on which especially those who design to influence their fellow men must ever keep their eyes, is the individuality of power and development. For this there are two requisites, freedom and variety of situations; from the union of these arise individual vigor and manifold diversity which combine themselves in 'originality'."

One of the most frequently repeated expressions which I, as a college teacher, hear is that of surprise at the fact that in college the student—even the freshman—is expected to argue and dispute, defend his point of view, and contradict that of his fellows and even of his instructor.

"Why," such a student will say, "at high school it was not healthy to differ with the teacher! Her ideas were supposed to be right, even if you knew they were wrong."

And Some Cannot Argue

Of course, one must remember that old Nietzsche once said, in developing a point of doctrine: "This is not said for those who have long ears. Nor is every word fitting for every mind. There are those to whom it is possible only to say: "I'm not a-arguin' with you, I'm a-tellin' you!"

To go back to Mill again: "At present individuals are lost in the crowd. In politics it is almost a triviality to say that public opinion now rules the world. The only power deserving the name is that of the masses, and of governments while they make themselves the organ of the tendencies and the instincts of the masses. This is as true in the moral and social relations of private life as in public transactions. Those who represent public opinion are always a mass, that is to say, collective mediocrity.

"If the claims to individuality are ever to be asserted, the time is now while much is still wanting to complete the enforced assimilation. It is only in the earlier stages that any stand can be successfully made against the encroachment. The demand that all other people shall resemble ourselves grows by what it feeds on. If resistance waits until life is reduced nearly to one uniform type, all deviations from that type will come to be considered impious, immoral, even monstrous and contrary to nature. Mankind speedily become unable to conceive diversity, when they have been for some time unaccustomed to see it."

"Insane" Because of Our Views!

In other words we are drawing near to the time when it will not be safe for a Republican to hint that some other candidate might not be more effective than Mr. Hoover, or for a Democrat to allow a preference of Governor Roosevelt instead of for Mr. Smith. And the sign of it is to be found in this scrap of court testimony, apparently taken seriously, that the evidence of a man's extreme eccentricity lay in the tenacity with which he held his opinions

Of course, those opinions might have been very curious ones. He might have expressed a belief in a flat earth. He might have denied the beneficence of vaccination, or prohibition, or female suffrage. He may have been a heretic about the high protective tariff, that shibboleth of our liberties. He may even have felt that women's recent clothes were a return to the dark ages after the freedom and simplicity of five years ago. He may have expressed his doubts of the democratic theory of education or of the advisability of opening the hydrant and inundating the courts with young lawyers, competent or not.

He might have expressed a doubt whether a surfeit of pastry and ice cream sodas is really much better for a people than beer and wine. He might have gone astray on censorship, or primaries, or sunback bathing suits, or smoking in restaurants. No matter what! If he held his opinions tenaciously, declare him non compos mentis and disallow his will in favor of the conformists.

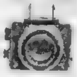
NORMAN WHITE PLEADS FOR JAIL CHUM

At Radio Station With the Candid Camera

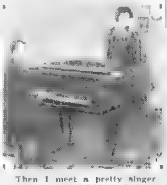


By CANDID CAMERA

It was my first trip through a radio broadcasting studio. At Radio Station WBZ, in the Hotel Bradford I met and photographed some of the cogs in the interesting wheel of radio entertainment.

No use telling you that John McNamara is an announcer. No doubt you have seen his picture, but I have him right at the "Mike" doing his job—and what a job he does.

These radio experts are never mentioned over the ether waves, but what rough reception you'd get if men like William J. Lawlor, control engineer, didn't give close attention to control box and other equipment



Then I meet a pretty singer. She is Constance D'Arcy. I photographed her while she sang. The genial gentleman at the piano is George Harris of Somerville. These people cheer you many times a week

Outside looking in was Miss Lillian J. MacGillivray, of Somerville. Here is as near as you can get to that broadcasting outfit, when you haven't an "In."

MAYOR WARNS VETO MEANS TAX JUMP

Urges Legislature to Override Ely's Action on City Retirement Fund Bill

Members of the legislature were warned by Mayor Curley today that if they sustain Governor Ely's veto of House bill 391, an act which would reduce the amount paid into the city retirement fund by municipal authorities by approximately $500,000 this year, they will be responsible for an increase of 25 cents in the Boston tax rate for 1932

Under the terms of the Boston Retirement Act accepted in 1922 the city assumed the obligation of raising $20,000,000 in the 30-year period beginning in 1923 to provide pensions based on the service of employes prior to acceptance of the act

BACKED BY EXCHANGE

The contribution by the city for this year would amount to $1,330,000. If House Bill 391 is accepted this amount would be reduced by $500,000 and the city would be permitted to extend the period of accumulation from 30 to 40 years. The mayor explained that this change would take 25 cents off the tax rate

The bill was vetoed by Gov. Ely last week. In his communication to the legislators the mayor stated that on two occasions Corp. Counsel Samuel Silverman sought an audience with the governor with a view of explaining the situation, but no opportunity was afforded him to submit the facts

Members of the Massachusetts Real Exchange have recommended favorable action on the bill.

Rattin declared he sighted Fawcett some 350 to 500 miles inland from Porto Velho, Brazil.

In the Boston party with Donaldson will be Sidney B. [illegible] of Court rd., Winthrop; Montague Barrett of Norfolk, Va., and Boston; Capt. Frederick C. Meag[illegible] of 546 Western ave., Lynn; W. "Send them right in," said Thatcher Colt.

"Well, Mr. Colt," he said at last, "will you kindly tell me what is wanted?"

[illegible]

"I may say," added Edgar Quires, "that I do not have the slightest idea of why I am here, why I seem to be in the custody of the police or why I have been refused any information whatever by the detectives who brought me here and who have acted with the most overbearing complacence toward Mrs. Quires and myself."

"You don't know what has happened then?" asked Colt with quiet seriousness.

"I have not the faintest idea to what you refer or what has happened," Edgar Quires vigorously returned.

"From that," returned Thatcher Colt, "I assume that you have not read the newspapers."

"No—I had a headache this morning and did not care about reading them."

"Then I have the very sad duty to inform you that your sister Christine is dead."

"Dead!" he repeated in a calm voice. "That is impossible. You must have made a mistake in identities."

"Christine Quires is dead," repeated Colt inexorably. "She was murdered."

Colt too had risen to his feet. He put one hand calmly on the [illegible] shoulder.

Mrs. Quires lifted up her tear-[illegible]

The [illegible] face of Edgar Quires [illegible] were human.

She has been entitled only to the income until now. How much she has left, I don't know. She had got into the hands of speculators and moneylenders."

With a shining fleet of 1932 models, bearing the blue and white banners of the corporation, the General Motors began its spring campaign today with the first of five parades through Greater Boston and its suburbs. The newest models represented the three Cadillacs, the 8, 12 and 16; the LaSalle, Buick, Oldsmobile, Chevrolet, and even the latest GMC truck bearing the three types of Frigidaire. The parade was a forerunner of the General Motor show at Boston Garden from April 2 to April 9. The parade started at Gaffney st., by Braves Field, went out Commonwealth ave. to Beacon st., and continued through Chestnut Hill, to Wellesley, Natick, Framingham, Auburndale, Waltham.

'TONIC TAX' HIT AS BOOTLEG AID

A bitter attack on the sales tax was delivered today by [illegible] D. Sawyer of Ware in his argument before the legislative committee on rules for a tax on legalized malt beers.

"The sales tax is a scheme to protect the bootlegger. It seeks to raise $600,000,000, the same amount that we estimated could be collected through a tax on beer," he said.

"It taxes the soft drinks of the kiddies, but will not interfere with the hootch of the bootlegger.

"It will take $600,000,000 from the homes of the average men in order that the millions of bootleggers and thugs be held sacred.

"Chewing gum, matches, radios, autos, gasoline, oil, candy, movies—all must pay to protect the Volstead law, which protects the bootlegger."

Chariot races will continue nightly at the horse frolic this week in the Boston Arena for the benefit of Burroughs Newsboys Foundation, despite numerous protests lodged against the promoters of the show.

The protests arose last night after two horses were thrown and three drivers narrowly escaped injury.

A feature of tonight's show will be an attempt by the famous horse Midnight, owned by Col. Jack of Texas, to jump over an automobile filled with passengers.

GENIUS AWARD TO HARVARD MAN

New Orleans, March 31 (AP)—The American Chemical Society's annual quest for a young genius has resulted in the choice for 1932 of Dr. Oscar K. Rice of Harvard University.

Award to him of the $1000 prize of the society founded last year by Dr. A. C. Langmuir of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., was announced today.

3 Girls Save Jobs for Last Horses on Revere Payroll

Until today the veteran "Dan" and the team of "Tom and Lucky" meant little to the official axe of Mayor Casassa of Revere.

But three girl employes of the public works department thought differently.

Tom, Dan and Lucky were left off the city budget. They are the last three horses in city employ. Dan Donovan and Tom Foley, their drivers, met similar fate.

Then came Alice O'Donnell, Helen Barry and Gertrude Loeffler to the fore to collect funds and insure the horses "retirement" on a farm.

The move did better than that. It sent protests to Mayor Casassa that resulted in an order today to keep them.

Dan is an ex-fire horse and hauls a hose reel in North Revere—if occasion arises.

PERSONALITIES ON THE AIR

Ruth Etting says if someone would write a song about the national budget problem, it would do more good than all the speeches in Congress.

Yeh, congressmen could take vocal lessons and sing the "Budget Song" instead of speeching.

Mebbe the song would give "Star Spangled Banner" a run for national theme song honors.

Pres. Hoover could be made copyright owner and the Cabinet could become song pluggers.

And if the song went over big, the sales tax on sheet music would bring in plenty budget money from this song. Boy, page Irving Berlin.

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY

Colt Begins to Pierce Mystery

business together?" asked Thatcher Colt.

"No—but it would not surprise me. Christine had seemed to lose all sense of self-protection. She was led around by Lola Carewe as if she were a hypnotized subject. I tell you, Mr. Colt, that Guy Everett and Lola Carewe conspired together to get my sister's fortune away from her—God only knows if they have left anything at all—and when Christine was ready to expose them, they killed her."

Thatcher Colt and Edgar Quires shook hands. Then, with his hand laid tenderly on the arm of his wife, the brother of the murdered Christine departed. As the door closed the police commissioner pressed a button.

And thus it was that two plainclothes men were set on the trail of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Quires, while Colt and Dougherty once more put their heads together for new plans and fresh devices.

"I have been racking my brains ever since last night and I confess that for hours on end I couldn't get within an inch of the problem," went on Colt. "But tonight I expect to solve it."

"Tonight?"

"Yes, Dougherty. In a little while you, Tony and I are going back to that penthouse. And we are not coming out of it until this mystery is solved."

And 30 minutes later we found ourselves back in the apartment that had been the home of Lola Carewe.

[illegible] final solution of the two murder cases.

In our party there were four—Thatcher Colt, Dougherty, Flynn and myself. We walked into this tense assemblage, in utter silence. Chung stepped forward to take our wraps, but Thatcher Colt motioned him off. We put our things away in a closet, and then, as Thatcher Colt paced forward toward the center of the room, the rest of us grouped ourselves as the chief had requested near the door. All other doors and windows were guarded [illegible].

[illegible] Dougherty, Flynn and myself.

"Now, gentlemen," he continued, "we shall first attempt to recreate the movements of Christine Quires from the time that she said good-night to Mr. Guy Everett until we found her body. In doing this, I must ask you to keep one fact clearly in mind—that through the medical examiner's evidence we know that Christine was killed several hours before Lola Carewe, although her body was the second to be found."

"Rigor mortis had set in," Dougherty supplemented.

"Exactly. Now mark what happened. Christine said good-night to Mr. Everett in the lobby downstairs. She then got into the elevator and rode up to the twenty second floor—the one below this."

"What, then, could have happened?"

"Let us imagine that we can follow her footsteps. She is not feeling well. She has left her New Year's Eve party because of illness. She has, let us say, but one idea—to get to bed. So, feeling very ill, she traverses the long corridor downstairs. She mounts the twisting iron staircase that leads to the entrance door of this pent-house door. From her purse she takes a key. She opens the door and enters this room.

"She sees no one. Lola is out. Mrs. Carewe is in her room, and the door is closed. The servants are in their quarters. She feels cold. She goes over to the fireplace. She puts her purse, wet from only a few moments' exposure on the sidewalk, on the mantel where it remains unnoticed until I picked it up last night. Christine is feeling very ill now. The report of the medical examiner shows that her stomach had been upset by indigestion."

How Many Girls Marry for Love---Convenience?

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE MAN [illegible] he could tell the company that he was a married man, and then he'd hold his job. Just lately the girl found out about it, and went into the court and told the judge. The [illegible]

[illegible] what made her husband [illegible] her if he hadn't told her one day when he was sort of peevish. I suppose dinner was late or the apple pie was soggy or something. Poor thing! I'm sorry for the girl, aren't you?

And where do you suppose her eyes were all this time, and where, oh where [illegible] intuition we hear so much about, and so very seldom see in action?

Don't you suppose she suspected the truth all the time, and just wanted the man, and thought to herself, "After we are married, I will make him love me!"

How can a man make a woman happy if he loves her when he doesn't care the paring of his fingernail for her? Love is as easy to see as the measles, it seems to me.

The whole affair is rather enlightening, isn't it?

I wonder what the average man really thinks of a thing like that—not what he says, mind you, but what he thinks.

Doesn't many a man marry because he's tired of boarding houses, and can't afford a club, and thinks it would be nice to have a pretty little girl make his coffee for him and tell him how handsome he looks in that new tie?

Aren't [illegible] to the truth?

What if the men should suddenly decide to [illegible] who married them [illegible] for home?

One of the girls in the office [illegible] furniture and hem curtains, then all the other girls in the office start to looking around for somebody who will buy furniture and curtains for them too.

[illegible] that she can't live without him?

In the old countries it is quite the usual thing for a young man's [illegible] to say to him:

"Son, you're getting along to the time when you ought to settle down. Why don't you look around for a nice girl? There's Hilda or Emeline or Lisa—they're all nice girls, and each one of them has a tidy little sum which would help to furnish the new home. Don't wait too long, son. You'll get out of the marrying idea, and that's bad."

Son stops, looks and listens, and the first thing Lisa knows she has promised to marry son—and why [illegible]

Her older sister is married. Her brother is going to America. Does she intend to be left alone to look after the old folks? Not she. So away she trips to the altar, and things are pretty well settled for her.

I do hope the example of the Western girl, who got the divorce when she found out exactly why her husband married her, won't spread. I'm afraid it would be a little embarrassing to say the least.

Daily True Story

"Call Me Pop"

"POP" WATKINS was undersized and what hair he had left was snow white. For the past [illegible] years he had been a guard for the Union Trust Co. He was well liked by all with whom he came in contact and was never addressed [illegible] but the affectionate sobriquet of "Pop", and always with a certain amount of deference.

The [illegible] dressing the old guard with such deference went back many years, [illegible] wise cracking propensities. Pop sat down on a bench not far from the cashier's window and became immersed in a newspaper.

When the cashier had finished, [illegible] "Pop" never heard him and still kept reading his paper. The cashier by this time completely exasperated, came from behind his cage and strode up to where "Pop" was sitting. He pounded him on the back and, in a voice loud enough to wake the dead, yelled "Hey, runt, I'm talking to you." [illegible]

LICKED THE INSULTER

"Pop" dropped his paper. He had heard only one word—runt. That was enough. His eyes narrowed and as he leaped from the bench he clenched his [illegible]

"Guess I could give a good account of myself even today if the same thing happened," he mused, doubling up a small, but hard fist, despite his 65 years. At that moment the voice of Mr. Sands, treasurer of the Union Trust, interrupted his musings.

"Oh, Pop," Mr. Sands said, "I was just thinking of you and I [illegible] payroll job to someone else. You know," he added, "we were thinking of sending out an additional guard on that payroll, too, because of what happened only a few blocks from where you're going today."

"Pop's" indignation rose at [illegible] the payroll, even though it was his last day, and at hint of an extra guard he nearly exploded. But, after deliberating a moment, he realized that Mr. Sands was only trying to be considerate and he said, [illegible] "Please if you don't mind, Mr. Sands, I'd like to do this last job myself and without an extra guard. I have a gun and I'm not afraid to use it."

"Mr. Sands smiled. "Alright, 'Pop'," he said. "But you'll be extra careful, won't you?" he asked anxiously.

"Pop" nodded [illegible]

He was about six blocks from the laundry, and passing the deserted remains of what had once been a stable, when he felt a hand on his shoulder. Startled, he turned around and saw confronting him a pimply faced [illegible]

"Got a match?" the youth asked out of the corner of his mouth.

"Certainly," Pop replied and reached inside his coat pocket. As he brought forth the match and faced the youth with it, he found himself looking into the business end of an automatic.

"C'mon, in through that side door and make it snappy," the bandit commanded, motioning towards a door at the side of the stable.

[illegible] a corner.

"Let's have all the dough in that bag," was the next command. [illegible]

"Make it snappy!" he barked. "D'ya think I've got all day?"

"I haven't got the key. I forgot it," replied "Pop" helplessly.

"Oh, Yeah!" was the retort. "Who're ya tryin to kid? You find the key damn soon or I'll shoot the lock open and do a little target practice on you for good measure,—you runt."

BODY STIFFENED

[illegible]

"Thanks to all of you," he said "and don't ever address me as Mr. Watkins as some of the speakers have done tonight. Call me 'Pop.' I like it, and, besides, it's good for your health," he added, with a twinkle in his eye.

Value of Fresh Air Must Be Emphasized

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

FOR CENTURIES night air was believed dangerous and harmful to health. Windows were barred and children as well as adults rarely ventured out in the night air.

Dr. Copeland

I am sorry to say that the ancient and barbaric custom of sleeping in a room with closed windows still prevails in many homes. Even now there are those who do not realize the importance of properly ventilated homes—the health value of fresh air.

When impure or stale air is breathed the resistance of the body against infections and disease is lowered. Headache, irritability, loss of appetite and even severe digestive disturbances are often due to impure air. A common cause of the ordinary cold is breathing the dry air of crowded places and of poorly ventilated rooms.

Lack of fresh air in packed trains, theaters, offices and schools often causes severe headache and dizziness. If you work in a crowded room make sure that the windows are open from the top and bottom. This will supply the necessary moist air and replace the impure air.

Continued lack of fresh air may result in an anemic condition called "chlorosis." This form of anemia is found in young girls who avoid fresh air and walking, confining themselves all day to close, dimly lighted and poorly ventilated rooms. The disease is rarely seen among country girls who enjoy the benefits of fresh air and sunlight. Fortunately, the treatment of this condition is simple and effective. It consists essentially of good food, rest, plenty of fresh air and sunshine.

Recent studies show that lack of fresh air may affect the body in several ways. Fresh air aids the body in maintaining a normal blood pressure, pulse, respiration and what the doctors call the "metabolism rates," as well as normal nervous reactions.

Ban on Battalino. ↑ Sport and Murder.
Common Sense Act. The Dividing Line.
Boxing Derelicts. ↓ Concerning Boston.

A Little Straight From the Shoulder Talk

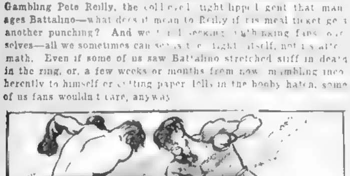
We want to doff our new Spring Kelly to old man Muldoon and the N. Y. State Athletic Commission this grand morning morning for their insistence [illegible] Bat Battalino take an enforced rest of 60 days before again appearing in a Gotham ring. The action was humane and founded on sound common sense. Fighters do not stand up under such a blizzard of blows as Battalino plunged head long into round after round in his recent battle that was one fight in which battle was no [illegible] with Billy Petrolle with out suffering serious effects. Another hard battle right on top of it, for either winner or loser [illegible] might result in a fatality or even worse [illegible]. The Cauliflower Patch [illegible] wrecks of stalwart young men cripples [illegible] battered into imbeciles, bad health or premature old age through undergoing the mar[illegible] and tortures that often are committed in the fair name of Sport. The Public wants murder. The promoter gives it to them.

MURDER TONIGHT

Strong words, mates, strong words. Yes, but the case demands them. We personally have seen six men killed in the ring, six strong, happy, glorious young lives snuffed out because of the sordidness and callousness that surrounds The Game. We have had too many of our good friends among the boxers hammered into cripples, imbeciles and criminally insane not to raise a voice when we get a chance to save others from a like Fate.

It was the rigors of the ring that made champions George Dixon and Joe Gans victims of the White Plague, Pete Herman and Joe Shugrue stone blind and Sam Langford partially so, that made Terrible Terry McGovern temporarily insane, that forced Ad Wolgast to spend the last 15 years of his life a hopeless lunatic and has Kid McCoy behind the bars in San Quentin prison serving a term for murder. Remember all those were champions or world famous fighters, better cared for, better guarded than the average boxer.

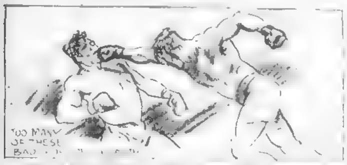
It is only strong intelligent, run [illegible] honest and fearless officials who can save the fight game from themselves. The boxer himself is too "game"—or too dumb to recognize when the game is not worth the candle. Bat Battalino wants to fight again—sure he does! And Matchmaker Jimmy Johnson and the Six Hundred Millionaires of Madison Square Garden it means nothing to them if a young fellow gets his brains knocked out, as long as the golden flood pours into the coffers of the big corporation. Gambling Pete Reilly, the cold-eyed tight-lipped gent that manages Battalino—what does it mean to Reilly if his meal ticket gets another punching? And we [illegible] seeking fight-loving fans our selves—all we sometimes can see is the fight itself, not its aftermath. Even if some of us saw Battalino stretched stiff in death in the ring, or, a few weeks or months from now mumbling incoherently to himself or cutting paper dolls in the booby hatch, some of us fans wouldn't care, anyway.



GREAT FOR FANS, H[illegible] ON FIGHTERS.

It is hard sometimes for officials to [illegible]. They don't like to offend great corporations or affluent influential individuals. See how the N. Y. Commission after [illegible] Battalino soft soaped Pete Reilly by throwing him a [illegible] officially declaring Battalino was not "knocked out" by Petrolle [illegible] because the bout was stopped by the referee. The commission made a mistake in that. A fighter does not have to be counted out to be knocked out. When a referee stops a bout to save a boxer from further punishment it operates as a knockout. But we are willing to forgive the N. Y. Commission all the mistakes it ever has made, or ever will make, as long as it occasionally turns aside a young fellow headed for hospital or insane asylum and [illegible] the vultures who feed on him.

Here in Boston it wouldn't do any harm to exercise a little stricter control. We have seen bouts here which have been permitted to go longer than they should have been. For instance, the recent Retzlaff-McCarthy massacre should have been stopped before it ended. If what we hear is true about Leslie Baker, the official State physician should be careful to examine him carefully before permitting him to face the punches of Jackie Fields in Boston Garden tomorrow night. We are told that in Baker's last Garden appearance in a scheduled four-round preliminary he was not permitted to enter the ring because of a heart weakness. Perhaps that heart weakness was temporary, for since then he has been examined by four competent and disinterested physicians and his heart pronounced normal.



TOO MANY OF THESE BA[illegible]

Sport is sport as long as the [illegible] as long as contestants do not oppose [illegible]. Sport becomes brutality pure and simple when a [illegible] overmatched, or when the encounter becomes so fierce and savage as to jeopardize life, health or sanity. Think of a few of these things friend fans the next time you start to "boo" a referee for stopping a one-sided or dangerous encounter. Nine times out of ten you don't mean those boos, anyway. Like a flock of sheep you're following the crowd and the crowd only is led into booing by a cheap gambling gentry which for the sake of a few lousy dollars would crucify a brother.

There is nothing the matter with boxing itself. It is a fine, clean, red-blooded he-man's sport. But there is something decidedly the matter with the parasites that infest it and the vultures who feed on it. Don't let them get the upperhand, friend fans. Kick 'em out, Mr. State Commissioner. More power to you both.

Yesterday's scheduled exhibition tilt with the Shreveport club was called off because of rain.

New Orleans, March 31 (INS)—Some statistician in the training camp of the Cleveland Indians has figured out that the Tribe's spring fielding record has been almost as good as the championship fielding in the American league last year.

Although the Indians were burdened with weak fielding last year the team fielding average this spring has been .975, one point under the average of Philadelphia and Washington, who tied for the league fielding lead in 1931.

Rained out yesterday the Indians [illegible] were to play the Toledo Mud Hens here in an exhibition game.

Los Angeles, March 31 (INS)—A downhearted Pirates crew meets the hard-hitting Chicago Cubs today with the hope the Cubs may be easier to chew than the Pacific Coast Angels. The Corsairs were beaten 9 to 5 by the Angels in an 11-inning contest yesterday.

Atlanta, Ga., March 31 (INS)—The amazing Phillies shove off for Philadelphia tonight after their fourth game with the Atlanta Crackers which the Phils hope to make a fourth straight victory. The Phils copped yesterday's game 7 to 5, to make it three straight.

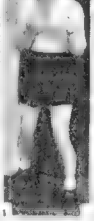
Sports Tax to Give Ringside Patrons 15 P. C. Break

Washington, March 31—A 10 per cent tax on all sports admissions of more than 46 cents is a part of the bill adopted by the House for the purpose of attempting to balance the national budget.

From college football and pro baseball alone approximately $3,500,000 may be realized.

Boxing really gets a slight break from the new bill, for at present the tax is graduated from 10 per cent on $3 to $5 tickets, with a 25 per cent tax on higher-priced pasteboards. Thus the ringside patrons will not suffer as of yore, but the boys in the cheap seats will contribute for the first time.

HEUSER SAILS FOR GERMANY



Ad Heuser

Adolph Heuser, German light heavyweight, sails for Germany today. He will return to this country the latter part of May and probably will meet Maxie Rosenbloom.

Heuser had an old wound back of his right ear opened while training for a tussle with Rosenbloom.

Dr. Martin H. Spellman declared it would be unwise for Adolph to box again for six weeks and so Heuser decided to take a trip home during his layoff.

When Heuser returns to America he will be accompanied by his two sisters. He plans to buy a home near Boston.

SERIES UPSET BY CIRCUS AT GARDEN

Montreal, Que., March 31 (AP)—Col. John S. Hammond, president of the New York Rangers Hockey Club, threatened today to forfeit the final series for the Stanley Cup to Montreal or Toronto unless arrangements were made to play two of the five-game series in New York.

Hammond [illegible] to [illegible] Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, the complications that have developed in the final playoff.

Although the Rangers qualified for the closing games by defeating Canadiens in a best-three-out-of-five game series that ended Tuesday night, the second finalist will not be determined until Saturday night at the close of a two-game series between Montreal Maroons and Toronto Maple Leafs.

Because of the arrival in Madison Square Garden in New York of the annual spring visit of the circus April 5 the problem of getting in the opening two games in New York so far has baffled officials.

"We are not seeking to force the winners of the Maroon-Leaf series to rush to New York immediately after their home and home games conclude Saturday and play on Sunday. That would be unfair," Col. Hammond said.

"But it would be fair to all concerned if they played in New York on Monday and Tuesday nights (April 4 and 5). The New York public is deserving of some consideration in the cup games.

"In 1928 we were in a similar position, but instead of pressing for at least one game in New York we moved the entire series to Montreal. Now we believe Montreal or Toronto should reciprocate.

"If we do not get two of [illegible] games, the Rangers will withdraw and forfeit the cup to Montreal or Toronto."

The coming series should be one of the best in the annals of the Can-Am League. It will be the fourth time in six years that Manager Eddie Powers has piloted a team into the finals. Dorothy Hunter May Take Man's B. U. Golf Team Berth

If Boston University authorities approve there will be a girl on the men's varsity golf team this year. Dorothy Hunter of Newton, State junior girls' golf champion last year.

Fred Corcoran, State handicapper and coach of the Terrier golfers has given his O. K. and Manager Arthur Chamberlain of Newton, is also in favor of the plan.

It remains for the Faculty Council on student athletics to okay Miss Hunter's eligibility.

If the girl is allowed to compete it will probably be the first time that a member of her sex has gone into intercollegiate competition on the same basis as men.

MORGANS NOT HEAVY OWNERS OF STEEL

By B. C. FORBES

J. P. Morgan's withdrawal from high official position in the U. S. Steel Corporation is more logical than was his acceptance of the position.

Mr. Morgan has devoted relatively little time to the affairs of the corporation. He has never been regarded in any sense as one of its executive officers. The real burden bearer has been Myron C. Taylor.

Mr. Morgan—"Jack" to his friends—is extremely sentimental. He accepted the chairmanship of the steel board solely out of sentiment. His father's closest crony, George F. Baker, largest steel stock[illegible] Morgan into service. Then [illegible] J. P.'s industrial creation.

Frankly Ford [illegible] staked much on the new [illegible] four-cylinder [illegible]

"A man asked me if I thought the present system of doing business was going to last," the motor magnate said. "I told him that since commerce and civilization depended on the manufacture and exchange of goods I was willing to manufacture and exchange under any system.

"The only bad system I know is one that interferes with [illegible] working and exchanging what they make.

"CAN'T HELP BUYING"

"We are just one concern doing our best to start business under present conditions. Other manufacturers are directing their efforts to the same public good. I think there is field enough for any article worth the money.

"There are just two permanent satisfactions in business for me. One is designing and making a useful commodity, and the other is the jobs thus created. If you do one, the other naturally follows. I don't think it possible to separate them.

"It seems to me a waste of time to have to urge people to buy in this country. That is not the manufacturer's business anyway. His business is to make something so good at a price so low they cannot help buying."

SPECTATOR Says:

Short covering plus a little more "sunshine" from Washington, where the drive to balance the budget is clicking nicely, has brought some further improvement into the market. The basis of the current comeback is largely technical, combined with relief from the blues which pervaded Wall Street a few days ago, and as such makes it a tricky market to get into.

Horace Bowker

Reports indicate that, in spite of crop-overproduction, farmers now intend to plant about the same, and in some cases, larger acreages than last year.

These reports further show that farmers are seeking to reduce their costs by farming less intensively—which really means, by skimping on seed, soil preparation and fertilizer.

This indicates a material increase in unit crop costs for 1932 and a further serious handicap to farmers, as well as to banks and others directly concerned with farm credit."

Importance of current earning power on stock market values has overshadowed relationships in corporate analyses. Little consideration is apparently being paid to ratio of funded debt to outstanding stock. Due to debt retirement with the proceeds of new stock offerings during the common stock fever in 1928 and 1929 many corporations have reduced this relationship quite drastically during recent years. An interesting case is found in United [illegible] with a present funded debt per share of $[illegible] against $[illegible] in 19[illegible]

Payments in April

Journal of Commerce compilation shows dividend and interest payments in April will total $651,200,000, comparing with $743,672,148 a year ago.

STATE ST. Hears:

That the market is now looking to the imposition of stock loaning restrictions for the impulse needed to carry prices higher. Some congestion undoubtedly exists, but for the most part is thought to be concentrated in a few leaders. Nimble traders are long on stock in the hope of catching something on the upside, but will run quickly if bears fail to be stampeded.

The Oils

Of the whole list the oils are currently in the strongest position, in the opinion of many observers. They point to the recent boost in crude prices and to reports from the mid-West telling of another in the near future. Another talking point is the stability achieved between production and consumption in the [illegible] stocks are [illegible] unchanged from a [illegible] ago.

After a long period of [illegible] settlement, due to the inability of oil leaders to arrive at some mutually satisfactory curtailment plan, it would not surprise if the oils were among the first to find the way out of the slump. For the most part the group has been deflated to rock bottom prices and it appears investors have little to lose in buying at present levels.

National Banking Call Is Withheld

New York, March 31 (AP)—National banking circles heard reports today that the customary call by the [illegible] of the currency for statements of conditions of banks on [illegible] close of the first quarter would not be issued this year.

Reports said that omission of the March call was decided upon a month ago in the interest of economy and to obviate the disturbing effects upon the money market of the usual window-dressing activities by the banks in anticipation of the call.

Quiet Profit-Taking in London Market

London, March 31 (AP). Trading today was quiet with profit taking and fears of continental liquidation causing a downward trend led by Swedish Match issues. Encouraged by better report from New York and settlement day having the Paris Bourse showed a better tone and closed firm. Berlin Boerse was weaker.

NEW FORD OFFERING MAKES DEBUT

MAYOR CURLEY T. J. CORCORAN

C. A. ESSLINGER

The new Ford automobile, with all its new features, in eight and four cylinder models, is on display today for the first time, in the Ford plant in Cambridge. Mayor James M. Curley is shown inspecting the new car. The mayor is shown with C. A. Esslinger, New England manager for the Ford Motor Co., and T. J. Corcoran, assistant New England manager. "The New Ford will be shown all day and evening Friday and Saturday at the Cambridge plant."

STOCKS LOWER AFTER EARLY RALLYING

New York, March 31—March's final session saw important shares move downward after an early bulge, as the "short squeeze" expected in some quarters in connection with the new rules on loaning stocks failed to develop on schedule.

The list pushed up in the first hour, but when the demand, apparently from nervous shorts, was satisfied, the market found itself almost completely without support, and in the afternoon losses of one to more than four points were numerous.

RAILS, UTILITIES SOLD

Utilities were particularly weak, and selling later engulfed the rails.

Stocks closed with a weak tone. American Telephone and Atchison lost 5 points or so, while U. S. Steel, American Can, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, Eastman, du Pont and Allied Chemical lost 2 to 3.

Volume increased in the last half hour and transactions for the session approximated 1,300,000 shares.

It was suggested in several quarters that selling represented, primarily discouraged liquidation by holders who had been planning to get out during the expected short squeeze as a result of the new loaning regulations.

In the utilities, particularly in some of the issues of the Electric Bond & Share group, some brokers believed there was forced liquidation of accounts impaired by the substantial decline.

As a result of the new loaning regulations, requiring brokers to have specific permission from customers before loaning stocks held on margin to short sellers, considerable calling of loans of stock was expected.

Two large houses were preparing to call about 75,000 shares, and 40,000 shares respectively.

Some substantial increases in borrowing were expected, but in the main most brokers felt that the floating supply of stocks would not be seriously curtailed and would adequately care for the small short interest, although there might be some upsets in small issues.

BIG LISTING APPROVED

New York Stock Exchange has approved the application of the Consolidated Oil Corp. for the listing of 14,311,432 shares of no par common and 141,294 shares 8 per cent of cumulative preferred stock. The company was created through the consolidation of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil, Prairie Oil & Gas and Prairie Pipe Line companies.

Atlantic Refining Co. has advanced price of bunker fuel oil at Philadelphia to 70 cents a barrel from 65 cents for grade C at refineries.

There was little in other markets to influence the course of trading. Early strength in bonds was upset by the break in the rails. Cotton was lower and wheat was steadied by strength in Liverpool. Foreign exchanges were irregular, with the dollar holding well against European currencies.

Ford's price announcement on his new line was without particular influence market-wise. Motor stocks were lower, led by General Motors, but selling was inspired by the weakness in the market rather than any special influences.

Electric Output Is Less Than Year Ago

Electric output in the United States for the week ended March 26 totaled 1,514,553,000 kilowatt hours, a decrease of 10 3-10 per cent hours produced in the like week of 1931, the National Electric Light Association reported yesterday. In the preceding week, output was off 8 6-10 per cent.

A decrease of 4 7-10 per cent was shown in the Atlantic seaboard area. In the New England area, output was down 4 3-10 per cent. In the central industrial region, which includes Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Milwaukee, the decrease was 19 9-10 per cent.

There was a drop of 9 8-10 per cent in the Chicago district. In the Pacific Coast territory, output was off 16 6-10 per cent.

Relative Position of Leading Lines

New York, March 31—Industries whose earnings should make the best showing in the first half of 1932 are listed by the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, as follows:

Chain stores, dairy products, electric and gas utilities, flour and feed, medicines and drugs. Package foods, refrigeration, shoes, specialty bakeries, telephones.

The following lines, while they make a poor showing currently, are listed as among those which will be among the leaders in the next sustained period of advancing business:

Curb Stocks Lower; Trading Is Dull

New York, March 31 (AP)—Reactions in a number of utility stocks gave the curb market a lower drift today, although volume remained small.

Members of the Electric Bond & Share group again were offered. American Gas & Electric dipped a couple of points to a new low for the year, while the new Bond & Share common and the $5 preferred also proved heavy.

Grains Are Easier in Chicago Market

Chicago, March 31 (INS)—Grains closed easier here today following early unevenness. Wheat finished ⅛ to ⅛c lower, corn ⅜ to ⅝c down and oats ¼ to ½c lower., Rye was ½ to 1c lower.

BUSINESS GAIN NOTED BY DUN'S

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Trade Review in this week's issue will say regarding conditions in Boston that during January an improvement took place in employment conditions in the textile and allied industries among the boot and shoe manufacturers and leather and subsidiary interests. Retail trade has been rather irregular this week, on account of weather conditions, and a few manufacturing lines are showing lines of slight increases.

Quite a large volume of orders for structural steel has been received by the local fabricators. Building lumber is showing a slight seasonal increase in sales, and prices are unchanged.

Hardwood lumber sales continue in moderate vloume. Operations in the furniture factories have been much curtailed, although some improvement is noted. Foundries, machine shops and tool plants also are showing a slight increase and at the ship-building yards employment continues at a high level.

Rubber goods, granite, confectionery, and the printing trades continue to operate on a subnormal basis.

Kelly-Springfield Capital Change

Changes in the capital structure of Kelly-Springfield Tire Company are proposed in a plan submitted to stockholders today by William H. Lalley, president.

WESTERN UNION STOCK CHANGES

During 1931, a year in which the pric eof Western Union Telegraph stock declined more than 100 points to below 40, there was naturally considerable shifting of holdings among the larger stockholders. Perhaps the most important single change was the elimination of J. Vincent O'Reilly of New York as one of the 20 largest stockholders. He had 12,000 shares at the end of 1930 and at the end of 1931 his name was not included in the list of 20 largest, the smallest holding of which was 2375 shares.

THE HOUR HAS STRUCK

At the request of thousands of indignant Americans who have stormed our office (and why must they bring a lunch and carelessly throw banana skins all over the place?) we are publishing the above picture. It is a warning to mothers and fathers who permit their children to play a game called "tennis," which breaks down natural barriers, arouses class prejudice and congests the courts, causing endless delays. Statistics show that parents must be doubly alert in Spring time. Act now. Send a contribution to the League for Promotion of Legislation that will abolish all forms of sport, along with the automobile, fancy hatbands, sen-sen, Springtime, and the birds and the bees and the flowers.

KENTUCKY FIGHTS AGAINST AMERICA FOR FRONTIER

By GILBERT SELDES

THE CITIZENS of Bell County, Kentucky, are nothing if not consistent. They have turned back from their State-line notable writers and communists; now they continue by barring the way to a group of college youths who do not wear leather jackets for fear of being taken for communists. I think that the Kentuckians' disinclination to receive visitors will not persuade anyone that the conditions of the miners there are above reproach, and there is something offensive to the old American idea of free movement and free intercourse in the wholesale arrest of men and women before they have committed any crime. It isn't even pleasing to know that Mr. Walter B. Smith, the county attorney, was at the head of the crowd which forced the collegiate bus to the side of the road and that he himself, apparently in his official capacity, asked the students, "Do you believe in God?" as a preliminary to banishing them.

GILBERT SELDES

Old Pioneers

Yet there is something more than a quarrel between the mine operators and radical investigators in the stand of the Kentuckians. I do not know whether it is more or less important than the economic quarrel, but I think it should be noted. Mr. Smith made a long, arrogant and eloquent speech, at the very beginning of which he said, "These representative citizens who have met you here are the sons of the pioneers of this nation," and went on to say " . . . you shall not bring into our midst any elements of propaganda that shall add to our problems or disturb our peace . . . You have sounded your trumpets before you on the precious claim of your 'liberty' of free speech and a free press. You seem to have forgotten that we have some liberties and rights to protect. Your self-constituted, uninvited commission comes here on your claim of right and protection to wield your alien propaganda. We interpose our rights—our rights vested in our property, our families, our churches and all our sacred institutions." And Colonel Reed Patterson, a local attorney, said, "The streams of these mountains will run red with blood before we will surrender our country."

It is quite possible that these men are so emotionally enlisted on the side of the mine owners that they will go to any extreme to defend them; but what they are saying has the accent of truth. They think of themselves as defenders of a great American tradition. Kansas may grow sophisticated and California deliver itself to the movies, but Kentucky stands as the last frontier. It is protesting not only against a radical theory which has not yet been accepted by America; it is protesting against the East, against the intellectuals, against writers, against colleges, against aliens.

I think that neither radicals nor reactionaries give enough weight to this element in the struggle between Kentucky and the United States. They should be particularly aware of it just now, because the man who first pointed out the significance of the frontier, Frederick J. Turner, has just died, and the obituary notices recall the fruitful idea which he gave to America. In his own words "American social development has been continually beginning over again on the frontier. This perennial rebirth, this fluidity of American life, this expansion westward with its new opportunities, its continuous touch with the simplicity of primitive society, furnish the forces dominate in American character."

West Conquers East

To early historians the winning of the West was something accomplished by the East, the gift of culture brought to the prairies and the forests by the hardy men of New England and Middle Atlantic States. Since Turner wrote "The Frontier in American History," we know that the Western Reserves, the Louisiana purchase, and all our conquests westward have had an even greater effect on the East than they had on the West. Farm houses are still rotting in Vermont because land was cheap in Oregon. Our humor (witness Will Rogers) is still the humor of the West; we could incorporate floods of immigrants because Nebraska and Idaho could absorb them.

One of the things I have always had against my education was that it never taught me the importance of the change which came over America when the Homestead Act became a dead letter because the Government had no more free land to give away. America could no longer spread itself; it had to concentrate. The process of concentration led to the Ford system of manufacture, just as the process of expansion made millions of motor cars desirable. Our economic troubles come to us naturally. We stopped being a nation with plenty of free land, but we kept on acting as if we were.

The little enclosed district of Kentucky, although it is a mining section, still lives as if the frontier existed. No wonder it comes into conflict with the rest of America.

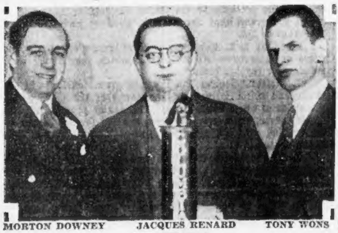
Poems Penned for Tony Wons Deluge Contest Editor



MORTON DOWNEY JACQUES RENARD TONY WONS

When Tony Wons arrives in Boston for his appearance at the RKO Keith Boston Theater Saturday, he will have a big job selecting the winning poem from all the mail that Boston Evening American readers are sending in to the Contest Editor.

A cash award of $25 will be made by Keith's Boston Theater for the best poem submitted and the winner will also see Tony as he broadcasts the winning poem from the studios of WNAC on next Thursday morning, doing the regular nation-wide broadcast of Tony's "Scrap Book."

The judges will be Wons, Morton Downey, Jacques Renard and a member of the Boston Evening American Staff. Autographed copies of Tony Wons' Scrap Book and two guest tickets to the RKO Keith Boston Theater next Thursday or Friday will be awarded to the authors of the 10 next best poems.

A poem that is not original does not have much chance. Tony's wide knowledge of poetry, the result of years of reading to find material for his scrap books, has given him a pretty good idea of what is new and what is not.

Tony has been conducting these contests in several cities because he feels that there is good poetry tucked away in the minds of people who never try to write it.

So get out the pencil, pen or typewriter and send your verses to the Tony Wons Contest Editor of The Boston Evening American, before next Tuesday, at 6 p. m.

What the Hearst Papers Advocate No. 4 — End of Lame Duck Sessions. Installation of President and Congress immediately following election.

China Teaches U. S. Lesson

Nation's Safety Lies in Defense Strength

China is awakening to the realities of the modern world, according to Finance Minister T. V. Soong, regarded as one of China's ablest leaders.

In an article just published in Shanghai, Minister Soong refers to his country's complete disillusionment as to the efficacy of international covenants, and the pledged protection of international treaties.

> "If China is to survive as a nation, she must prove herself capable," says Minister Soong. "She must put her national defense above all things."

The thirty-four days of struggle between the Chinese and Japanese at Shanghai revealed to the world an unsuspected fact—that China had learned to fight.

The courage her forces displayed—although at a great disadvantage in equipment compared with the Japanese, and despite the supposed perfection of the latter in discipline and the use of modern implements of war—made a profound impression upon the nations of the west. It meant that every equation or calculation in which China is a factor, must be recast.

It brought to mind the words of Prime Minister Pitt, after a smashing victory of Napoleon over the European coalition—"ROLL UP THE MAP OF EUROPE," said he,

> "It will not be needed again."

If China has achieved a national will and a national unity of purpose, the map of Asia may well be rolled up. A new and powerful draughtsman has come upon the scene.

China's intelligence is fully equal to the task of mastering military science. It is her disunion and her misplaced faith in organized peace and the tutelary attitude toward her of the western nations, instead of upon self-reliance and her own competence, that has reduced China to helplessness in the past.

HELPLESSNESS, she now perceives, IS AN INVITATION TO AGGRESSION. The League of Nations, the outlawry of war, the nine-power treaties, she now beholds in their true light.

THEY ARE NOT SOURCES OF PROTECTION, BUT LURES TO DESTRUCTION, IF A PEOPLE IS SO FATUOUS AS TO PLACE ITS TRUST IN THEM.

China's belated adoption of a program of national self-defense should NOT BE LOST UPON OUR PEOPLE. Too long we have tolerated the cutting down of appropriations for the maintenance of our army and navy at their proper strength.

The ancient empire of the east, in its long history, has taught the world many things. Perhaps our pork-barrel statesmanship may be able to extract some instruction from humble and long-suffering China, and cease their efforts to curtail and reduce our means of national self-defense, UPON WHICH ALONE THE NATION'S SAFETY DEPENDS.

The Sheriff's Chance

Let's Have Some Names, Mr. Keliher!

"Bad Willie" Gray is home again. Boston's police again showed commendable ingenuity and their decisive action has put the gunman and his burglar-valet back into the custody of Sheriff Keliher.

It is to be hoped that the sheriff will take a personal interest this time in seeing that Gray, the boastful robber and jail breaker, does not again make him and the law ridiculous by quite such a quick and easy departure. Our police department has something else to do beyond watching a leaky jail and risking their lives in recapturing escaped gunmen.

The estimable sheriff can partially redeem his conduct of the county hotel for prisoners by finding out just how Gray and his pal made such an easy get-away. It is obvious that the job was well-planned and perfectly executed, using the sheriff's own words. Several persons must have been partners in the plot to turn this bad man loose on the public again. Persons inside and outside the jail must be involved.

Of course, the sheriff must first clean up his own organization. There was obvious carelessness, and probably worse, inside the jail.

The name of a politician, in fact, a State jobholder, is being freely mentioned as the master mind of the escape plot. If our lawmakers and jobholders are racketeering in jail breaks, that is carrying modern law defiance just a little bit too far.

Let's have a real investigation, Mr. Sheriff. Let's name some names.

The people are entitled to all the facts, with no protection for politicians or friends of politicians. The people do the voting, Mr. Keliher. They are decidedly insistent on knowing all about this latest farce as presented in your jail.

Oust the Lame Ducks

People to Pass on Good Proposal

The people of Massachusetts are to pass upon the constitutional amendment which would abolish the notorious Lame Duck sessions of the national Congress.

The Legislature declined to assume responsibility for this amendment until the wishes of the people have been consulted.

It is well. The legislators seem to have demonstrated a regard for popular democracy sadly lacking among those few Massachusetts members of Congress who declined to grant the public the right to express their conviction upon prohibition.

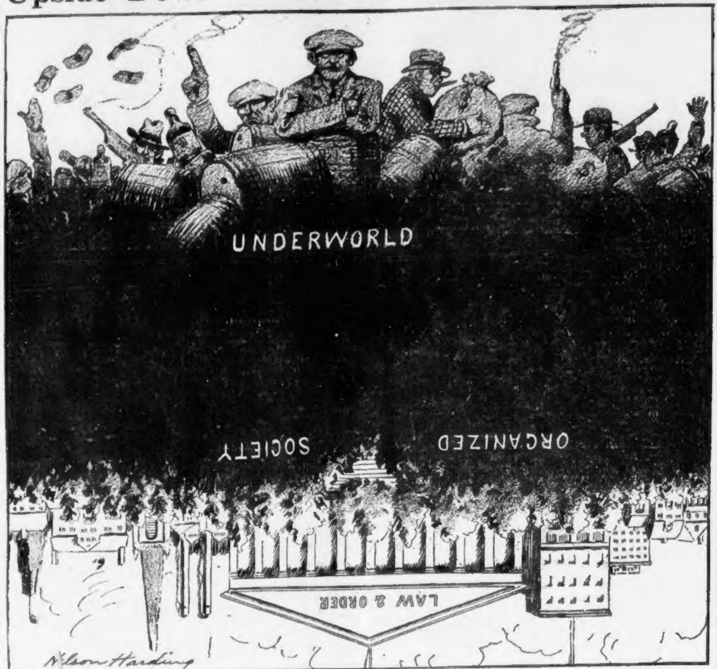
We have made progress in democratic government in this commonwealth. In fact, the policy of the State, as declared by the law of 1920, is to defer ratification of constitutional changes "until the opinion of the voters of the commonwealth has been taken relative to the wisdom and expediency of ratifying the same."

There can be no doubt that the good people of Massachusetts are disgusted with Lame Duck sessions and will decide to eliminate them forever. They want their laws to be enacted and their policies of government to be decided by Congressmen who have been elected by them, not by Congressmen who have been repudiated by them.

Rpresentative Owen Gallagher has played a fine role in this campaign to date, and he should see to it that the question of abolishing the Lame Duck sessions is placed upon the ballot in a form understandable to the voters.

Upside Down

By Nelson Harding.



Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

You and Your World!

DIZZY DAYS, these! How are you going to dope things out? How are you going to find and keep your place in this sad, bad, mad, upside-down world?

You're asking those questions, aren't you? Doesn't matter who you are—big, worried boss down at the office, or little, weary mother in the home, or penniless drifter in the bread line—you're asking those questions. And you're getting more bewildered and frightened every day because you can't find an answer.

Your world and you—how are you going to work together?

You're not going to work together at all until you realize just what "your world" is.

Your world isn't that three-ringed circus outside you. It isn't that combination of men and machines, laws, policies, prejudices, institutions and organizations which you contact every day.

Your world is INSIDE you, not outside you.

Your world is not what you meet in life. It is your own, secret attitude toward life. It isn't a material thing. IT IS A THING WHICH YOU BUILD OUT OF YOUR OWN THOUGHTS AND EMOTIONS.

What makes life a success or failure for any man?

Not outward circumstances, but his own attitude toward those circumstances.

Take any twenty penniless men, of the same age, the same degree of health and experience. Turn them loose on a street. They will all see the same street. They will all feel the same cold, the same weariness, the same indifference or downright brutality.

But, by the end of the day, some of those men will have found work and friends. Some won't. Some will be full of hope. Some won't. Why? Weren't they facing the same world with the same equipment?

No, they weren't.

Actually each man was facing a different world—THE WORLD WITHIN HIM. And those secret, inner worlds were as far apart as the stars.

One man through the years had built a world of cherished resentments, of bitter memories, of hate, rebellion and spite—the world of a mad dog.

Another man, with much the same lot, had built a world of fear and shame and stealth—the world of a hunted rat.

And still another man, battling with the same outward conditions, had built a world of hope and courage and fighting confidence within himself.

Physically, those men inhabited the same house, the same city. Spiritually, they moved through different worlds; and as they moved each man gathered to himself the things that suited HIS world.

The man who feared found that which he feared.

The man who hated found cause for hate.

The man who hoped found an answer to his hope.

You can't control the world outside you, but you can control your attitude to that world; and by controlling that attitude, you can shape your life according to your pattern.

That does not mean that you can have everything you wish that your prayers will be answered literally. Unpleasant, heart breaking things may happen to you, in spite of your courage and confidence. You may lose your job, your health, your home. Your friends may betray you. Your dear ones may die.

YET YOU MAY SURVIVE ALL THESE THINGS, AND FEEL PEACE WITHIN YOU, AND STRENGTH, AND FAITH, AND EVEN JOY—IF YOUR INNER WORLD IS HEALTHY AND HOPEFUL.

Hold on to that thought during these difficult days. Grip it with all your spirit, and pass it on. It is the one thing upon which you can build. Everything else may fail you, but YOUR WORLD will not fail you if you have built it truly, bravely.

New York Day by Day

Far From Broadway

NEW YORK, March 31—Because of the engaging frankness of this letter and its authenticity, I am printing it instead of the usual column today. In the fashionable boarding school hand of 20 years ago, it bears a remote postmark. Deleting personal preliminaries, it reads without change:

"Mother sends me clippings from your column. One relates the whereabouts of several stage beauties when you came out of the sticks to New York. You will note by the signature I was one of them. Perhaps I should say I was so press-agented.

"You once wrote my hair was 'like a twirl of phosphorus.' That was a dye. The other month you inquired: "What ever became of ———?' I intended to drop you a line but thought better of it. I have no fear you will reveal my identity or whereabouts.

"I have done nothing criminal, but my past is so completely behind me I want to remain that way. I do not believe anyone has ever more successfully wiped out their past. My biography would be called incredible should I ever write it, and I shall not.

"In my third year on the stage I decided it not to my liking although exciting. In the Broadway style I remained 'a good girl,' although I attended wild parties, drank entirely too much, smoked and permitted certain liberties to say the least unladylike.

• • •

"Suddenly tiring of it all, I married. My husband was from a western city and had admired me from the front row. To him I was that over-worked word—glamorous. Then he told me the line so familiar to every stage girl. He wanted to get me 'away from it all.'

"He was not exactly my 'dream man,' but I liked his exuberance. We went to his city, after a honeymoon on his cousin's ranch, and lived with his parents, really charming elderly people trying to hide their shock over the son 'marrying a stage girl.'

• • •

"In a few months I was quite unhappy. The tinsel, powder and paint wore off and out of the spotlight I was not so attractive to my husband. He drank, gambled, cheated, and his parents looked upon me as so much extra baggage. I asked to go on a visit to New York. Once there, I never returned, wrote or saw him again. I was notified of his divorce through the newspapers.

• • •

"After several years, a show girl without talent, and I had none, is completely out of the running. After trying everything almost and failing, I had about decided to take the easiest way. But instead I made one final effort and became a manicure girl in a lower Broadway office building. I worked at this and was able to support myself in a cheap room on Amsterdam avenue.

• • •

"I met a few customers 'after hours,' but I could not be a gold digger. Then one day I was transferred to the barber shop of an ocean liner, my boss having secured the concession. On this boat I was thrown in contact with the ship's help and a chief cabin steward seemed in love with me. He wanted to quit the sea and go into business in his birthplace. We married in Liverpool and without knowing a word of his tongue, we journeyed to his village, far away.

• • •

"Today I live among 3000 people, I speak the language perfectly, as do my three children. I have never been back to America and do not expect to. So long have I been away I speak English with a slight accent. I admire my husband. He is honest, loyal and devoted, but I cannot say I love him. Time deadens a lot of the old longings, and I am fairly content as a middle-class housewife. My only diversion is going to the movies, seeing such lovely actresses as Norma Shearer and imagining I might have been a star too had I not blotched up my life. That is, however, only a pleasant fantasy. I have little talent.

• • •

"Class distinction is strong here, and my children will likely grow up to be servants. Yet I wonder, after all, if they may not be happier. When I finish this I am going to milk the cow and prepare the evening meal. Broadway seems very far away. For obvious reasons, please do not answer this letter."

Making the Best of It

Making the best of it! What do you mean:
Doing with little and staying serene?
When but a burden has luxury been?

Making the best of it! Do you regard
Toil and its need as excessively hard?
Since when has indolence paid a reward?

Making the best of it! Can it be said
Children grow strong when on sweets they are fed?
Since when has cake nourished better than bread?

Making the best of it! Twist it about
Difficult problems and dark days of doubt,
Once more are bringing the best of us out.

What the Hearst Papers Advocate No. 8 — Five-billion-dollar Federal loan for public works and to relieve employment.

Let in Light on These Public Treasury Raids!

By Julius G. Berens

Financial Editor New York American.

Congress at last has awakened to the dangers inherent in false use of Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds.

The storm in the Senate this week over the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's grant of a $12,800,000 loan to the Missouri Pacific Railroad developed from Senator Borah this thought-provoking assertion:

> "I am informed that every form of pressure within reason and PERHAPS DECENCY was used to bring about this decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

He referred to the Commission's "RELUCTANT APPROVAL" of the Missouri Pacific application for the loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Under the law which created the corporation railroad applications for funds must receive Interstate Commerce Commission sanction.

The "reluctant approval" by the Commission served public notice of an insidious pressure exerted to open wide the purse of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—in FAVOR OF PRIVATE BANKING INTERESTS.

Out of the PUBLIC FUNDS which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is advancing to the Missouri Pacific the railroad will utilize $5,850,000 for repayment of half an EXISTING loan from one public banking institution and TWO PRIVATE banking houses.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation was created for the purpose of alleviating WORTHY enterprises which find themselves in temporary financial straits. It was NOT organised to BAIL OUT any PRIVATE bankers who were ANXIOUS to be RELIEVED of loans which they no longer deemed attractive.

Nor, for that matter, was the corporation created to bail out any banking institution from loans which they are desirous of DUMPING into the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is a PUBLIC enterprise, created by the PUBLIC'S representatives, and financed by PUBLIC funds. A loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is a loan from the PUBLIC TREASURY.

If private bankers plan through "PERHAPS INDECENT PRESSURE" raids on the public purse to save themselves from the folly of their own indiscretions, then the public is entitled to the truth and the whole truth about the entire transaction.

LET'S HAVE IT!

Thank Heaven, Some Shows Are Decent!

[Reprinted from Editorial Page of New York American of Tuesday, March 29.]

In the foyer of a fashionable hotel the other day there was seated a group of men enjoying their after-dinner coffee and cigars. One of them, displaying symptoms of an impending anecdote—one of those tiresome little wheezes which turn upon a nasty double entendre—turned his glance circumspectly over his shoulder, saying, "I hope no ladies are hereabouts."

Another of the group assured him he was in no danger of feminine audition, but said, "Remember, however, there are a few gentlemen present."

It would be well if the point of this story could sink into the minds of our theatrical producing managers and the dramatic critics and reviewers who, as the defenders of "sophistication" in the theater, aid and abet its indecencies.

The theater in New York has reached such a pass that its cleansing is no longer a matter of eliminating a vulgar line here or there, or excising specific obscenities.

The frank purpose of too many productions is to pander to the lowest tastes of the lowest elements in the community.

It is no longer a question of spicing a production by a daring line or a piquant situation of the risque order.

FILTH IS THE OBJECTIVE.
FILTH IS THE MEDIUM.
FILTH IS THE TECHNIQUE.

The result is that countless men—not girls or callow youths, but men, not of the squeamish or ultra-sensitive type, but self-respecting and mature—are ashamed to be seen as a part of the audience at many of our theaters.

The responsibility for this disgraceful condition rests heavily, but not primarily, on the theatrical producer. He, however, can claim, with a certain truth, that he is merely purveying the type of entertainment for which there is a profitable commercial demand.

The responsibility must be shared by the critics and reviewers who proclaim to the public on the day following an initial production that the show is good or bad—worthy of patronage or not.

Lest they be thought provincial or inexperienced, they approve or gloss over INDECENCIES which they fancy to be mundane or "sophisticated."

The faithful portrayal of life, the art which lurks in simplicity and moral earnestness, the power of truth are outside the ambit of our swinish stage. The decent productions, and, thank heaven, there are still some, are too few to qualify the censure and reprobation which the theater as a whole so abundantly deserves.

The theater claims to be in a "bad way." This is true from more standpoints than that of patronage and financial returns.

It is in a "bad way" because it is a bad theater, because it is a source of defilement, because it is a libel on American taste, because it is a libel against the clean art of the theater, WHICH IT HAS DEBAUCHED AND WELL-NIGH DESTROYED.

Martha's Dresses

As if George Washington's stature were not great enough, Professor Albert Bushnell Hart essays to make him a demigod, a being of superhuman courage. At least he says:

> "Final proof that Washington was not only the bravest man of his day, but also one of artistic talent, lies in the fact that he ordered his own wife's dresses."

We want to know more about this. How many failures did he pick out? In what Rue de la Paix did he do his ordering? Were dresses ready made in those days, or did George merely pick out some pretty material when he went on visits to Boston and New York?

Further, we should like to know if his choice of material was unbiased or influenced by the hope there'd be enough left over to make a waistcoat for him. Martha Washington being what she was, we are sure that she had the last say and was also keen for alterations.
